STEEL MEN ACCEPT CODE

Today

It Has Got to Work. Nations Form Trusts. Light Years; Work Years. Stood Up; Shot Down.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HOW DO you think NRA will work?

To that universal question one man, old in business and commercial experience, replies:

"They have GOT to make it work."

They truly have got to make it work. The downfall of this gigantic, daring experiment could have consequences not pleasant to contemplate.

LLOYD GEORGE says NRA will be the salvation of the world, or its ruin. The French —some of them—say it will be the ruin of America only.

"Making it work," changing a national system, suddenly, from free competition to government control of wages, days and hours, calls for much wisdom, tact and caution.

The big stick will not do it, at least it will not coerce organized labor. In one union, 60,000 men, striking in New York, tell the NRA chairman:

"The government guarantees the right of workers to collective bargaining. That means unionism, and we do not want to hear anything about unionism without any union."

David Dubinsky, speaking for 60,000 strikers, said they would not go back to work, for anything or anybody, until the employers officially recognized the union.

THE BIGGEST industrialists in the country, those employing the largest armies of mechanical workers, including some that have led in paying wages higher than the union scale, will fight against being unionized as firmly, although, perhaps, not as threateningly, as Mr. Dubinsky fights for union control.

Not an easy job is before the NRA authorities, but they have GOT to make it work.

IT WAS time for this country to modify, or get rid of the ante-diluvian Sherman law that forbids industry to organize, sanely, limiting waste and expensive competition.

In Europe, governments themselves are in what used to be called "the trust" business, on a gigantic scale.

France, Italy, Germany had combined their shipping interests, especially the passenger carrying ship lines.

Now the British government consolidates the Cunard and White Star lines, as the "British National Service." Government finance will help British ships to fight those of other nations, and the great Cunarder that has been lying unfinished for two years or more will be completed and put to work.

THIS GOVERNMENT may find it necessary to stop worrying about the welfare of other nations, their murderous war plans, etc., and co-operate financially with its own industrialists, especially if NRA imposes conditions that make old methods impossible.

THE ASTRONOMICAL expression, "a light year," being the distance that light travels in one year at 186,000 miles per second, is called the "yard stick of the universe." Scientists say the most distant "outer universe" is 300,000,000 light years distant. Figure that!

The government's public works administration, approving building plans, appropriates $37,000,000 for New York City's tri-borough bridge, and that means creating eighteen thousand "man years" of work, work that would keep eighteen thousand men busy for one year, or fewer men for more years.

The expression "man years" of work, new to industry, may become the yard stick of the new prosperity.

WHILE WE wonder about NRA, the crime wave continues to function, regardless of committees and government threats. A gangster with a sawed-off shot-gun or sub-machine gun cares little for committees.

Filippo Sclara, operating in Chicago, accumulated some wealth and went to Italy to relax. Then he resumed the "grocery and liquor business" in New York City.

New York did not want his competition and showed also its dislike yesterday by taking Sclara into a back yard in East 100th street. There his executioners stood him with his face to the wall, and shot him to death.

The gangsters apparently had read about the fate of traitors, and desired to give an official touch to their "execution."

Gen. Butler has outlined a plan that would discourage the crime wave, but the country is too busy with NRA to notice it.

THE GERMAN ambassador, Hans Luther, assures reporters that Germany is through with her revolution and is now occupied with evolution.

There are many kinds of evolution. One kind changed the tree shrew, smaller than your hand, to a whale. Another made a small, five-toed animal as big as a fox into the modern draught horse.

And evolution has worked the other way, making creatures smaller and weaker, like the male parasite crab, now carried under its wife's flipper. The fact that evolution has begun does not necessarily mean "going up."

J. D.'S KIN GETS KIDNAP THREAT

U. S. Sleuths Guard Grandson on Flight Across Country

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Accompanied by a bodyguard reported to be guarding him as a result of a threatened kidnaping, Winthrop Rockefeller, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, arrived here today by airplane from Houston, Tex., and departed shortly afterward for Newark, N. J., en route to Boston.

The 21-year-old son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was met at Municipal Airport by two federal agents.

Young Rockefeller refused to discuss the precautions that were being taken to guard him.

At every stop young Rockefeller is making by airplane the federal authorities apparently are taking precautions to protect him.

MET BY U. S. SLEUTH

When he arrived at Fort Worth, Tex., last night to pay a visit to William Slay, a Fort Worth friend and classmate, he was met at the airport by a Department of Justice agent.

Young Rockefeller had been in Texas for several weeks studying the oil industry.

En route from Houston to Chicago, Young Rockefeller stopped for 15 minutes at the Municipal Airport in Kansas City. There, as elsewhere, a guard accompanied him.

Upon his arrival in Chicago he was asked if the precautions taken meant he feared kidnapers. He jokingly remarked:

"Kidnapers—Why they've got them locked up, haven't they?"

When a bystander remarked he "hoped so," the young man replied that he "hoped so, too."

AGAIN, FEDERAL MEN!

The federal men who met the plane in Chicago declined to make any comment.

Young Rockefeller, it was learned, was traveling under an assumed name. The bodyguard, who purchased tickets for two, used the names of "Mr. Bennett and Mr. Wedelich."

Asked concerning young Rockefeller, the bodyguard assumed a blank expression and declared he "didn't believe he knew the man."

Young Rockefeller was heard to remark during his brief stop here that he planned to go on to Boston and take a position with the Colonial Beacon Company.

18 Hurt as Bus Overturns on Hill

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 19.—(INS.)—Eighteen persons were injured, two critically, when a large bus, Cleveland bound, skidded and overturned at the foot of a steep hill on the Syracuse-Auburn highway.

Five passengers and the driver are in hospitals. The driver's right arm was amputated.

Youngster, 7, Ambushed, Tied to Tree and Beaten By Boys Playing Indian

GLADYS JENKINS, 4 JACK JENKINS, 7

Young Jack telling his little sister at his home, 117 North Sprague avenue, Bellevue, how three other boys who said they were only "playing Indian" tied him to a tree and beat him. Jack has black and blue welts on his back and his mother made information against the three. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

PRINCE AND OIL HEIRESS WED

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—The surprise marriage of Miss Janet Elizabeth Snowden, daughter of the late James H. Snowden, wealthy oil producer, and Prince Di Siriggnano Dan Francesco Caravita became known today.

They eloped Thursday afternoon and were quietly married in the City Clerk's office.

The bride is the younger sister of the former Marion Snowden, who is now the Princess Girolamo Rospigliosi, of Rome and New York. She also eloped—when she was likewise 19—to marry her Italian prince.

At an informal party last night the newlyweds announced the marriage, and Princess Caravita, an attractive brunette, said that the romance started five years ago in Florence, although subsequently there was a four-year period in which she did not see the prince.

Walter Huston's Son Sues for Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—A suit for divorce from Mrs. Dorothy Huston, the former Jeanne Harvey of the stage and screen, was filed in Superior Court yesterday by John Huston, 28, son of Walter Huston, film actor. Young Huston is a scenario writer.

He charged Mrs. Huston was not a good housekeeper and objected, without reason, to his friends.

Bellevue Tribe of 3 Captured for Court After Rampage

Three youngsters of Shade avenue, Bellevue, who are alleged to have tied a 6-year-old lad to a tree and beat him while "playing Indian," will have to tell their story to Juvenile Court.

Mrs. John Jenkins, of 117 North Sprague avenue, Bellevue, made information against the three after her son, Jack, returned home last night with black and blue welts on his back, according to Bellevue police.

The three lads with a rope lay in wait in a wooded section of Florence avenue, near Shade avenue, according to testimony before Justice of the Peace D. E. Fleming, of Avalon.

After tying Jack to the stump of a tree they beat him, he related, with a "stick bigger than he was." Another party of boys dispersed the "Indians" and released Jack. He was treated by Dr. D. W. Seville, of 7 North Sprague avenue. The boys held are 7, 11 and 12, respectively.

David's Attorneys Sue Him for Fee

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—David Hutton, husband of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, the evangelist, had another suit on his hands today with the filing of a recovery action by the law firm which represented him when he lost a breach of promise suit to Myrtle Joan St. Pierre, Pasadena nurse, a few months ago.

W. L. Englehardt, G. J. Oppegard and Mark Jones asked $7,500 in fees from the portly singer.

WOMAN FOILS 'MATINEE' ROBBERY

Mt. Lebanon Police Capture Suspect in Apartment Hall

Described by police as a matinee burglar, a suspect was held by Mt. Lebanon police today in connection with the looting of apartments in Mt. Lebanon and the South Hills.

Unlike other men of his "profession," who prefer the dark of the night for their operations, the prisoner who gave his name as Fred Herman, 28, of Cleveland, chose the sunny hours of a mid-afternoon, according to Police Chief William J. Kane, of Mt. Lebanon. He was captured yesterday afternoon after police led by Chief Kane and Lieut. Ted Carrington surrounded the apartment houses in Central square.

They were summoned by Mrs. Harold Schuler, of 714 Roselawn avenue, after she frustrated Herman's alleged attempt to enter her apartment. He was caught hiding in the hallway of an apartment in Central square and in his possession Chief Kane reported finding $50 in cash, some old coins and a long, thin-bladed knife of high flexibility which it is said he used in opening doors.

Describing Herman's method of operation, Chief Kane said:

"Posing as a repairman for a sewing machine company and carrying an employe's badge, he would knock on the door of a fashionable apartment. If he received a response he pretended to be looking for repair work. When he ascertains no one is in, he immediately inserts the 'jimmy' in the door jamb and soon opens the door."

Kane said Herman admitted being an ex-convict, having served a five-year term in an Ohio penitentiary for similar robberies in Warren, O. Kane said Herman was released in 1931.

Herman told police he was married and came here yesterday.

Mrs. Schuler said she heard a knock on her door, but didn't answer because she thought it was a peddler or a panhandler. But when she saw the long blade coming through the door jamb she asked who was there and heard some one running.

YOUTHS FLEE POLICE SHOTS

Three shots fired at the youthful occupants of an automobile, believed to have been stolen, failed to halt them as they fled on foot after driving the car onto the sidewalk in Richey avenue, North Side, early today.

Police said they thought one of the youths had been wounded. After leaving the machine, Patrolman Donald Shope said he saw one grasp his side and momentarily falter.

Shope reported the chase started when they attempted to halt the machine for driving recklessly in Richey avenue.

The automobile was owned by J. E. Vinkovich, of 620 Chautauqua street.

First Lady Spends Night at Ebensburg

EBENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt spent the night in an Ebensburg inn after a tour of the Northern West Virginia coal fields, and continued by motor to her Hyde Park summer home today.

She was accompanied by one companion, Louise Hickok, of Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt talked to her husband, at Washington, over the telephone, saying she would meet him at Hyde Park tomorrow.

Checked!

MRS. GLADYS ANDERSON

2 HELD ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

An attractive woman, described by police as the former wife of a former deputy prohibition commissioner of Ohio, and her present husband were arraigned in Central Police Court today charged with leaving a trail of bad checks from California to Philadelphia.

They gave their names as Mrs. Gladys Anderson, 33, of 426 Dormont avenue, Chicago, and her husband, Albert Anderson, 43. They were held over by Magistrate T. D. Jones.

They were brought to Pittsburgh last night from Philadelphia, where they were arrested at request of police here.

City Detective oJhn Dean testified the Andersons were members of a gang of five that had passed 100 worthless checks ranging from $15 to $90 on Pittsburgh merchants. They would present spurious dividend checks of a fake insurance company and would identify themselves by fake policies, Dean testified.

Fasting Gandhi Still Scorns British Offer

POONA, India, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—The Mahatma Gandhi began the fourth day of his "fast unto death" today, disdaining the offer of the British government to free him from prison if he would quit his civil disobedience campaign.

Official doctors watched the health of the Mahatma but issued no statement on his condition.

ROOSEVELT GETS PACT FOR APPROVAL; COAL DEADLOCK CONTINUES

Mine Leaders Again to Confer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Kenneth M. Simpson, deputy administrator, said today he doubted whether a completed coal code would go to the White House before President Roosevelt leaves tonight for Hyde Park, N. Y.

Simpson's scheduled conference with the bituminous operators was moved forward from this morning until the afternoon because of other business demanding the attention of NRA chieftains.

Dissension continued among bituminous operators as the National Recovery Administration prepared to bring the entire industry under a code of fair competition.

A committee representing each of the 29 groups is to meet today with administration officials, probably including Johnson, in an effort to agree.

The operators were told the meeting was called to "harmonize" certain of their ideas for a code with the ideas of the administration.

Kenneth M. Simpson made it plain, however, that the meeting's product was to be a single code.

OPPOSE SINGLE CODE

Promptly J. V. Norman, of Louisville, counsel for the large smokeless-Appalachian group in West Virginia and Tennessee, asked whether representation at the meeting would signify assent to the idea of a single code. He was told it would not.

Norman said Western Kentucky, Tennessee-Georgia and Alabama producers wanted regional codes or no code at all.

Three of the principal differences among the operators provided the background for Norman's statement. The regions he mentioned have stood steadfastly for the open shop, and they want that provision written into any code which affects them.

The open shop is out. President Roosevelt made that clear when he talked to the operators.

They also insist upon a much lower wage scale than the $5 a day rate proposed by the United Mine workers of America and some of the northern producers. The southern West Virginia rate under its regional code would be $3.44. Alabama wants $2.40.

THE IRON HAND

The West Virginia operators also have proposed a 40-hour week, while the mine workers want 30 hours. Some of the other southern groups have asked for 48 hours.

Many of the operators saw in the conference today merely an iron hand in a velvet glove. They foresaw Johnson telling the committee just what he wanted, and that he wanted it right away.

Giant Metal Industry Joins NRA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Steel today led America's four biggest industries toward Blue Eagle membership.

On President Roosevelt's desk needing only his formal approval was a dramatically-obtained wage-and-hour-fixing code for giant steel. He and National Recovery Administration officials were hopeful that this would break the jam that also held coal and oil outside the recovery fold, and speed the pending trade plan for automobile makers.

Presidential approval and proclamation of the steel agreement was virtually certain. At midnight last night, after his spokesmen concluded six hours of plain talk with steel's representatives, the agreement was read to the President over the telephone. Mr. Roosevelt, who had expressed a desire for action on steel, coal and oil before nightfall tonight, approved the compromise.

Then Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, announced:

"The agreement reached upon the steel code involves:

"Hours—Average 40-hour week over three-months period, with maximum per employe of 48 hours and six days per week. On or after November 1, 1933, as soon as production reaches 60 per cent capacity, the eight-hour day for all employes, except supervisory, technical and emergency employes.

Wages—General increase of 15 per cent has been made since July 1. Minimum wages fixed in code are estimated by steel com-

MINERS HALT THIRD STRIKE

The mine strike at Montour No. 10 of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at Library was off again today.

Three hours after the 1,100 men walked out this morning when one of their number, Francis Helmick, a brakeman was barred, they agreed to return to work Monday morning.

Elmer F. Andrews, NRA mediator, succeeded in having the third strike in as many weeks called off.

Helmick was refused a lamp when he sought to enter the pit this morning. Helmick had not personally obtained Phillips' "O. K." after having been suspended because of an accident for which Helmick was held responsible.

Andrews asked Phillips:

"Would it be possible for me to get the 'O. K.' for Helmick?"

Philipps agreed and the men agreed the strike was off.

However, in event another miner, Edward Barwell, is refused permission to work, the men are immediately to notify Andrews who will lay their complaint be-

Alpine Climb Fatal To 4 Eton Masters

ETON, England, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—A report was received at Eton College that four of the school's masters had been killed in a mountain climbing accident in Switzerland.

The bodies of the men, who left here several days ago for a holiday, were said to have been found at the foot of a steep cliff.

Benjamin Thaw, Sr., Dies Here at 74

Benjamin Thaw, Sr., 74, banker and philanthropist, member of one of the foremost families of Pittsburgh, died today at his home in Morewood place. Death, which had been expected for some time, occurred at 6:15 a. m.

Mr. Thaw has been ill for some time, and frequently, in the past, had suffered from pneumonia. He was the father of the World War ace, Col. William Thaw, member of the Lafayette Escadrille.

Born in Pittsburgh, March 14, 1859, he was a son of William and Elizabeth Burd Blair Thaw.

He spent virtually his entire life in Pittsburgh.

In 1886, he married Elma Elizabeth Dows, of Cedar Rapids, Ia. She died in Paris in 1931.

One of their sons, Lieut. Alexander Blair Thaw, was killed in an engagement in France in August, 1918. He was in the American flying force.

He attended the Fourth Ward public school, and took a year's graduate work at Yale University, after graduating in 1878 from the Western University of Pennsylvania, now the University of Pittsburgh.

His first job was that of a railroad clerk. He entered the coke

panies to exceed an average of 40 cents per hour. (This results from fact that higher minimum wages than those fixed in the code are paid to large groups of common labor.)"

"Code administration and trial period—code to be effective for 90 days as a trial period to determine effect. Provision for three representatives of NRA to receive full information, with access to necessary records, to meet with board of directors of Iron and Steel Institute upon administration of code and advise the President so as to provide assurance that the code operation is in full compliance with the law, providing adequate protection of public interests and furnishing the basis for recommendations to the President as to continuation or modification of code after 90 days period of trial and determination of results."

The text of the revised code itself was not made public immediately, hence it could not be ascertained who had yielded on what. But the code still contained a provision giving employes a right to organize in any manner they chose, and without restraint. This, though, had not been a recent point of controversy.

PRESIDENT TO DIRECT

Putting oil's completed code in the President's hands was regarded only as a matter of time measured by the necessity of minor revisions in the bulky text. The chief executive himself will direct the federal group administering affairs for this industry. Washington officials reflected the view on the head-on clash between the automobile industry and labor over open-shop language contained in the code recommended by a big section of the business in which Henry Ford, however, did not join.

Siding with labor was the contention of Donald Richberg, recovery counsel, that words to "continue the open shop policy" must not be written into the automobile charter.

Though steel talk lasted beyond the midnight strike, Johnson found time to move frequently to a neighboring office where bituminous coal spokesmen sat, without agreeing, until early morning. Here the controversy raged among the operators about wages and particularly the open shop.

All the bustle coincided with a packing of luggage a block away at the White House for President Roosevelt's departure for Hyde Park tonight. His train time was the deadline set for steel, oil and coal.

Johnson Drives for Oil Code Approval Before Nightfall

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(INS.)—The government-control code for the nation's oil industry may be approved before night by President Roosevelt, despite an unexpected overnight delay.

National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson said he expected to send the code to the White House, after a day and night of protest and conference between government experts and leaders in the industry. Confronted with an avalanche of protests against various features of the code, Johnson made a strong effort to bring the major factions into agreement.

Modifications of the price and production control sections were expected to be contained in the code as approved by the President. Johnson, however, apparently refused to accept some of the recommendations of the government corps of experts.

All factions were seeking to influence the modifications. The price-fixing group, which scored when Johnson wrote a price control section into the bill, were not satisfied. They wanted price-fixing even to the ultimate consumer.

Virtually all of the bitter opponents of price-fixing had left Washington, apparently convinced that no amount of persuasion could wipe out this provision altogether.

Roosevelt May Get Auto Code Next Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(INS.)—A re-drafted automobile industry code probably will be submitted for approval to President Roosevelt late next week, it was announced today by Col. R. W. Lea, deputy recovery administrator.

Lea said there probably will be no further public hearings on the code. He said:

"I plan to study all the material submitted at the hearing together with additional briefs that are being submitted.

"An analysis of the material will be made and drawn up in code form for discussion with Gen. Johnson. When he approves the re-drafted code, it will be taken to President Roosevelt for study."

It was indicated the administration drafted code would not contain the "open-shop" clause which drew fire yesterday both from labor organizations and Donald Richberg, chief counsel of the National Recovery Administration.

Prospects also were that the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the code submitted by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce would be drastically revised.

MISSOURI WET VICTORY SEEN

International News Service.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 19.—Liberal leaders were confident of a topheavy anti-dry majority today as Missouri voters cast their ballots on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Victory for the anti-dry forces will place Missouri in the repeal column as the twenty-second state to ratify the Twenty-first Amendment nullifying the national dry laws.

Voters were showing little interest in the election at urban centers of population. Dry leaders gave the referendum scant heed in the pre-election campaign.

Liberal forces freely predicted a repeal victory by a 3-to-1 majority as election day dawned.

The delegates to be chosen will meet on August 29 to formally ratify the expressed will of the voters.

Four Dry Offices To Be Abandoned

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Prohibition enforcement offices in Harrisburg, Lewisburg, Scranton and Wilmington will be abandoned.

John D. Pennington, acting investigator in charge of the local prohibition unit of the newly created Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced last night that all investigators in the future will work out of Philadelphia on assignment.

The changes are being made in the name of economy.

Steel Worker Dies In Fall at Plant

Stephen Dolcak, 56, of 805 Oak street, Duquesne, was killed when he fell down steps in a blowing room of the Duquesne Steel Company last night, according to a Coroner's report. Witnesses said he fainted or slipped. He suffered a fractured skull.

FOREST CORPS EXTENDED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—The Civilian Conservation Corps will be maintained at full strength for another six months, but President Roosevelt hopes some of the men will find jobs to make way for others to enlist.

In conference with Robert Fechner, director of the corps, Mr. Roosevelt agreed there was enough work ahead to employ the 314,000 men for the full year.

However, he is writing a personal letter to the men asking that they make an earnest effort to find regular employment so that their places can be taken by others desirous of going into the forests.

He asked yesterday that the Army and Forestry Service find locations for 150 new camps.

BANK OPENING HITS SNAG

Citizens of Wilkinsburg are jubilant as the result of the successful completion of the stock-selling campaign for the new First National Bank at Wilkinsburg.

One obstacle has arisen because of the inability of the new bank to use $104,000 pledged by L. H. Gethoefer, chairman of the board of the closed First National Bank of Wilkinsburg and president of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company.

Recent laws are interpreted as preventing one bank from investing in the stock of another, but a committee is to go to Washington to seek the cash from some other source.

The success of the stock selling was announced by Thomas M. Allen, chairman of the depositors' committee, at a luncheon meeting yesterday at the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg.

The workers have sold 4,161 shares to 934 subscribers, an oversubscription of 161 shares, Allen reported.

The committee which has worked for the opening includes Allen, chairman; George R. Craig, S. C. McConahey, E. A. Jenkins, Jr., J. T. Miller, E. H. Gerberding, W. H. Cheffey and J. C. McQuiston.

PINCHOT TRUCE HALTS MARCH ON MINES

Governor's Plea Quiets 5,000 Jobless in Anthracite Fields

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Eastern Pennsylvania's fever of industrial unrest showed a sharp change for the better today with 5,000 unemployed anthracite miners observing a truce in their march upon mines and with the strike in the Pottsville shirt industry broken.

Gov. Pinchot won the halt in the miners' strike-fomenting activities and the National Labor Board obtained the agreement which broke the shirt workers' walkout.

Disorders continued in the unrest affecting at least 15 industries in Philadelphia, three persons being hurt and 15 arrested in one outbreak yesterday. Six hundred National Biscuit Company employes went out in the latest strike.

The truce in the anthracite area will expire Monday, but a federal conciliator is due today to study the situation and two more collieries open today, providing work for 1,650 miners.

MOTORCADE PROTESTS

Failure of the coal companies to operate all mines in rotation led the jobless miners to stage their demonstration yesterday. Mines were picketed and several of them closed, the workers joining the demonstators. A motorcade of more than 1,000 automobiles swung through Hazleton, Tamaqua and Mahanoy City.

Operators say it is impossible to spread the work as the miners demand because dealers desire coal from certain collieries.

Yesterday's demonstrations were orderly, although a group of unemployed men attacked a bakery during the miners' demonstration in Hazleton. State police cleared the building with riot sticks, knocking out the manager among others. Labor leaders said a strike was in progress at the shop.

U. S. LENDS MEDIATOR

Howard Colvin, a Labor Department official, was ordered to Hazleton by the National Labor Board to see if he could settle the unrest in the Panther Creek Valley. Colvin was assigned to the field at the request of Gov. Pinchot, before the miners voted at Tamaqua City to adopt the Chief Executive's truce proposal.

The National Labor Board announced at Washington that the Phillips Jones Company and the H. V. Bob Company, shirt manufacturers, and their employes had signed agreements with the board. Work will be resumed Monday.

Provision is made for the employes to elect representatives to negotiate wage and working questions with the owners, the board supervising the secret ballot on August 28.

DRIVERS STONED

It was at the shirt factory of the Eclipse-Needle Company that Philadelphia police arrested 15 strikers in a melee which brought injuries to three women. Police said the strikers stopped trucks bringing employes to the mill, stoned the drivers and mauled the riders.

Philadelphia labor leaders announced settlement of the neckwear industry's walkout with increases of "from 40 to 50 per cent" for the 600 strikers.

NEEDLE STRIKE ENDED BY NRA MEDIATOR

60,000 Ready to Return To Jobs After Both Sides Compromise

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—A settlement of the strike of 60,000 dressmakers, which had tied up the vast industry in the metropolitan area since Wednesday, was announced at dawn today by Grover A. Whalen, NRA mediator.

Whalen said the workers, who walked out from hundreds of shops in New York City, New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania, in what they called a protest against "sweatshop conditions" would begin returning to work Monday.

Wage scales were threshed out in an all-night meeting and an accord was announced, the complicated scale generally representing a compromise between union demands and employer offers.

35-HOUR WEEK

The union workers won the right of collective bargaining, one of the chief points of contention, as well as a 35-hour week. The agreement places responsibility on jobbers for payment of minimum wage scales and the maintenance of the code for the industry when it is adopted at Washington.

Contractors, who operate shops and produce goods on contract for jobbers, had complained in some instances that they could not pay higher wages until the jobbers paid them more. Whalen said:

"I think this is a great victory for the NRA. This agreement has been arrived at in quicker time than in any other industry. I think you will find these prices to be the highest ones adopted by any industry."

WAGE CONCESSIONS

He referred to the wage scales. Guaranteed minimum wages for work on dresses selling for $3.75 or less, as agreed upon by the conferees, follow:

Cutters, $45 a week; operators, 75 cents an hour in New York City; 63 cents an hour outside New York City; examiners, $20 a week in New York City, and $17 a week outside.

Pressers, 85 cents in New York City, 70 cents an hour outside; finishers, $20 a week in New York City, $17 outside; cleavers $15 a week throughout the territory, that being the minimum wage under the National Recovery Act; sample makers, $30 a week throughout the territory.

for the NRA coal mediation ban board at Washington.

The men say Barwell was evicted from his home reecntly because of union activities. The company contended he was "lazy and wouldn't work," according to the miners.

Lewis E. Young, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, assured Andrews yesterday that the man refused employment today would be taken back.

Young declared the company would recognize the union's checkweighmen and would show no discrimination against men because of union activities.

M'GRADY WINS LABOR POST

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—President Roosevelt has appointed Edward F. McGrady of Boston, as assistant secretary of labor, an appointment hanging fire since the early days of the administration.

McGrady was formerly legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor and lately has been an assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

The American Federation of Labor, which opposed appointment of Miss Frances Perkins as secretary of labor, urged McGrady for assistant secretary when she was appointed. National Chairman James A. Farley also backed McGrady. Miss Perkins, however, succeeded in holding up the appointment for months.

McGrady recently played a leading part in mediation leading to settlement of the Pennsylvania bituminous coal strike.

Boy, 8, Injured By Auto in Swissvale

George Mellinger, 8, of Wilson, suffered a probable concussion of the brain when he was struck by an automobile in Monongahela avenue, Swissvale, last night, police reported.

Police said the boy, visiting in Swissvale, ran from behind a parked [illegible]obile into the path of the machine.

COUNTY DROPS HENRY FROM PAYROLL

Many Other Candidates On Forced Furloughs During Campaign

Attorney John M. Henry, Democratic candidate for mayor, learned today that he will not be able to work in the interests of his candidacy and at the same time draw his salary as special representative of the Republican Board of County Commissioners.

Henry's name has been removed from the payroll for the duration of his campaign.

About a month ago the County Commissioners passed a resolution to the effect that any employe working under them would have to take a leave of absence if he or she were running for any major county office. Henry was appointed some months ago to represent the Commissioners at $250 a month, as an observer during the election fraud cases in Federal Court.

CAMPAIGNERS 'ON LEAVE'

At the same time that Henry's name was dropped from the payroll, several other employes under the Commissioners let it be known they are on leaves of absence while they are campaigning. Charles Campbell, a county assessor, is on leave while he campaigns for the office of sheriff.

Vincent Neeson, an employe of the Elections Bureau, also is off while he campaigns for the office of jury commissioner. Robert Foley, an assessor, and Harry Manion, of the Weights and Measures Department, also are on leaves of absence while seeking jury commissioners' posts.

A. D. Brandon, former Magistrate of Morals Court and a foreman in the County Highway Department, is enjoying two weeks' vacation, after which he will continue on a leave of absence while he campaigns for City Council.

TWO 'EXEMPT'

According to the mandate of the Commissioners, the office of Mayor of Clairton apparently is not considered very important. Edward Skapic, who once held the post of chairman of the Clairton City Republican Organization, is still at work in the county Elections Bureau, in spite of the fact that he is a Democratic candidate for Mayor. Skapic said today he intended to remain at work and had no intention of dropping from the fight.

J. S. Armstrong, a temporary clerk in the Elections Bureau, also is still at work, although he is an announced candidate for jury commissioner. Apparently the Commissioners do not include Armstrong as a regular employe, as his work is only temporary. He is engaged in copying registration books.

HOME AID BONDS TO BE SECURITY

The decision of the State Attorney General regarding Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds will help the work of the corporation in Pittsburgh, according to J. S. Baughman, local manager.

The decision opens the door to a number of financial institutions to accept the bonds in exchange for mortgages, Baughman pointed out.

According to a bulletin from the Philadelphia headquarters of the corporation, the bonds have been made acceptable at par as security for the deposit of public money. The Federal Reserve Bank has also been authorized to accept the bonds as collateral for advances to member banks, the bulletin said.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation also has agreed to accept the bonds as collateral for loans up to 80 per cent of their face value.

Hospitals Outside Recovery Act Scope

Hospitals not connected with business or industrial organizations do not come within the purview of the NRA, Donald R. Richberg has advised the American Hospital Association. This was made known in Pittsburgh by Miss Jessie J. Trumbull, president of the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania, on her return from Washington, where she attended a meeting of hospital associations.

Pair's Home for 29 Years Saved by 1st U. S. Loan

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—At last the silver lining has broken through the clouds which for years beset the John P. Flannagans.

And it is a substantial silver lining—the funds to save their home from foreclosure, given to them in the form of the first loan from the federal government in its effort to help needy home owners.

Surrounded by city, state and federal representatives of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Mr. and Mrs. Flannagan yesterday received from Jacob H. Mays, state manager of the corporation, some papers. The documents meant that the couple could remain in the home where the went as bridegroom and bride 29 years ago.

Flannagan said, as he received the $1,500:

"It's a great day for me, all right. I don't know how I can express my appreciation for the efforts of President Roosevelt in making such aid possible."

And 200,000 other families have their applications in, each hoping that they, too, may call in a "great day" before their homes are sold.

Leviathan Leased to Be Society Beer Garden

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cobina Wright, popular social leader of New York, whose "circus" parties have amused the four hundred for many years, has leased the Leviathan and plans to open it as an entertainment center, it was learned today.

Mrs. Wright, whose husband is William May Wright, has obtained permission of the United States Shipping Board to use the giant liner, recently retired from service, and now awaits permission of the city to use a dock.

If she is not allowed to tie her liner up to a dock, Mrs. Wright plans to anchor it in the Hudson River and take her guests back and forth in a fleet of little motorboats.

The Leviathan, mammoth liner acquired by the United States from Germany during the World War, was sold to the United States Lines at the end of the war.

It was removed from passenger service recently, when it became apparent that it could not be operated at a profit.

Mrs. Wright has formed the Leviathan Amusement Corporation, and plans to inaugurate a beer garden, a motion picture theater and a restaurant on the ship.

WOMAN BANDIT ROBS CARNEGIE MAN, 96, OF $5,000

GRABS MONEY AS HE RESTS ON PORCH

$1,000 Reward Offered For Arrest of Burly Robber

A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the arrest of a woman and the return of $5,000 which had been snatched from the vest pocket of Patrick Golden, 96, retired Carnegie real estate operator, while he was sitting on his front porch with his wife, 95, last night.

A sedan stopped at the curb, a heavyset woman dressed a black coat and hat stepped out and walked up onto the porch.

Without a word she pulled out a leather wallet from the aged man's vest pocket, and before the astounded Golden and his wife realized they were being robbed, the woman ran down the steps to the car, a man at the wheel stepped on the gas, and the machine sped away.

Neighbors told Police Chief Chris Keisling, of Carnegie, the lights of the machine were out and the engine running.

The Golden's are the oldest living couple in the borough, having settled there when they were married 68 years ago. According to John Golden, who makes his home with his parents, his father did not have faith in banks since the recent failures, and had kept his money in his vest pockets since. In with the cash was a check for $27. Mr. Golden said he was to have put through a deal mortgage loan today.

The Goldens have considerable property in the borough. The aged man retired from business 40 years ago.

SLEUTHS TRAP HAMM KIDNAP SUSPECT

Man Who Escaped Net At Chicago Fugitive From Pittsburgh

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—The unrelenting pursuit of kidnapers by Chicago, state and federal authorities today had bagged another suspect for questioning in the Hamm abduction.

Arthur R. Reese, 38, of Anoka, Minn., seized last night by Sheriff E. J. Welter at La Salle, Ill., refused to answer questions regarding four rifles, a shotgun, two revolvers and $882 found in his belongings.

Two federal operatives from Chicago were sent to question him and to check the money with serial numbers of ransom paid by William Hamm, St. Paul brewer, for his release.

Detective Chief William Schoemaker, also, said both men who escaped a dragnet set for abductors of John Factor Tuesday, had been identified. He named them as Charles Connors, 57, former Minnesota convict, and Basil Banghart, 32, of Detroit, also an ex-convict.

Schoemaker said that with them also the day they eluded his men was Ludwig Schmidt, once associate of Gerald Chapman, internationally notorious criminal, and of George (Dutch) Anderson, who was slain by officers.

Basil Banghart, sought as one of the men who escaped a police ambush for the kidnapers of John Factor, was identified today as the man who fled from a United States marshal in Pittsburgh October 16, 1928, federal officials say. Banghart's home is in Detroit where he has a mother, a wife and a child living.

U. S. Ready to Transport Touhy Gang to Trial Scene

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 19.—(INS.)—Federal authorities today were prepared to transport Roger Touhy, Chicago gang leader, and three associates under heavy guard to St. Paul, Minn., for trial as the kidnapers of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy brewer.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Leslie Salter, special Assistant Attorney General, hopes to have a Grand Jury in session next Wednesday to investigate the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil operator.

Salter, a former Oklahoman temporarily diverted from the government's war on Chicago gangdom, sifted a mass of data bearing on Harvey Bailey, held at Dallas and wanted for many crimes; Albert L. Bates, in jail at Denver, and others held for the reputed $200,000 abduction of the millionaire.

Meanwhile, from Canada to the gulf, the nation's peace officers kept a watch for George (Machine Gun) Kelly, missing member of the alleged kidnap gang.

Democrat Secretary Gets Revenue Post

Harry Lutz, secretary of the Allegheny County Democratic organization, has assumed the duties of assistant chief field deputy in the office of David L. Lawrence, internal revenue collector for Western Pennsylvania.

Lutz is assistant to William Driscoll, recently appointed chief field deputy collector of internal revenue. The latter succeeded W. R. Stevenson and Lutz succeeds Ernest Bailey.

10,000 CUBANS RENEW RIOTS IN STREETS

Machado Farm Sacked, Lynching of Porra Aide Demanded

International News Service.

HAVANA, Aug. 19.—Streets of Havana echoed today with the hubbub of new rioting as government officials declared the wave of Communism which endangered the new administration of President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes was ebbing.

The barbor strike, which has has crippled Cuban commerce for weeks, appeared near settlement as the workers indicated desire to co-operate with the government in aiding recovery and to withdraw all demands excepting recognition of their union by shipping owners, as the law prescribes, and for rotation of employment.

STRIKE PEACE LOOMS

Negotiators said it was now obvious the workers were willing to settle differences with their employers and return to their jobs.

The shipping owners, with one exception declared willingness to accept the demands of the harbor workers, and Col. del Gado, military mediator, threatened to bring governmental pressure on the shippers if the strike continued.

Meanwhile, Havana witnessed wild scenes as ritoing among a mob of 10,000 young Cubans hunting down surviving members of the hated Porra, ex-President Gerardo Machado's secret police.

Troops and menibers of the ABC, anti-Machado organization, captured Paul Rodriguez, a member of the Porra. He was imprisoned while the moy hysterically demanded he be lynched.

At the same time, thousands of persons sacked the Machado farm on the outskirts of the city, demolishing the house and orchards.

Cuban Refugees Dock Under Guard in N. Y.

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Under heavy guard of federal agents and city police, the Ward liner Morro Castle, with 16 Cuban refugees aboard, docked today at the foot of Wall street, where a crowd of more than 500 gathered in anticipation of trouble that did not materialize.

The Morro Castle, in from Havana, where some of its passengers ran the gantlet of death in escaping the island republic, was systematically searched from stem to stern in the fear that Jose Gans, former chieftain of the despised Porra, secret police, was a stowaway. Gans was not found.

That New York members of the ABC Revolutionary Party would have attempted the life of Gans, authorities did not doubt—just as they were certain that some members of the crowd were there for that same purpose.

Among the refugees was Oscar P Cintas, Cuban ambassador—now without portfolio—to Washington, who resolutely declined protection offered by Lieut. William F. Fay and 16 members of the bomb and strong arm squads, who hastened aboard the Morro Castle as soon as the gangplank hit the pier.

On the same boat, perhaps in the same staterooms that brought refugees to New York today, will sail for Havana men filled with hope and ambition, instead of men crushed by defeat of a fallen leader.

Col. Charles Mendietta, Col. Roberto Mendez Panate, Dr. Fabian Carcie, J. M. Gomez-Marti and Dr. Garcia Bayileres are in the Cuba-bound contingent. Col. Mendietta and Col. Panate are leaders of the Union Nacionalists, the principal anti-Machado party.

Roosevelt Recalling Welles as Reward

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(INS.)—Highly pleased with the manner in which Ambassador Sumner Welles handled the delicate situation in Cuba, President Roosevelt intends to recall him shortly to Washington to help direct the movement for development of closer trade relations with the nations of the western hemisphere.

He will be succeeded at Havana by Jefferson Caffrey, who will be elevated to the rank of ambassador in reward for his handling of the Cuban situation from this end.

WALKERS AVOID BOAT BLAZE

CANNES, France, Aug. 19.—(INS.)—A party of internationally known society folk, including Lady Mendl, the former Elsie De Wolfe, of New York, were safe today after a narrow escape when their speedboat burned and sank three miles off shore.

They were guests of Raymond Patenotre, former under-secretary of national economy in the French government, who was born in the United States. The fire was started by a backfire of one of the pair of 750-horsepower motors of the craft.

James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York City, and his wife, the former Betty Compton, had been invited, but failed to appear before the party left Cannes to dine at Cap d'Antibes.

After vain efforts to extinguish the blaze, the 15 members of the party and the crew of three were forced to leap overboard for their lives and swim to the island of St. Honorat, 100 yards away, whence they were taken to the mainland.

WIFE HASTENS TO SHANK'S SIDE

International News Service.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Mark H. Shank, wife of the Akron (O.) attorney who is alleged to have confessed the "picnic poisoning" of four persons, was at her husband's side today following a 1,200-mile motor trip which was accomplished in a little more than 48 hours.

A dramatic meeting between the alleged poisoner and the wife who raced a third of the way across the continent to his aid took place at the Pulaski County Jail last night.

Shank vehemently reiterated his innocence.

Others in the party who motored here with Mrs. Shank from Ohio were former Judge E. H .Boylan, Anthony Rock, businessman and president of the Kiwanis Club of Kenmore, O., and the Rev. J. L. Waldhisen, rector of the church to which Shank and his wife belong.

Shank is accused of poisoning Alvin Colley and his wife, Ethel Colley, and their two young boys because of fear of being involved in a theft he says Colley committed.

Man Hurls Stove, Wife in Hospital

David Cutler, 39, a Negro, of 228 South Twenty-first street was sought by South Side police today after he is alleged to have hurled a coal stove at his wife, Irene, 39, during an argument in their home.

Irene was taken to South Side Hospital in a serious condition.

HOUSE ABLAZE, TWO SAVED

An invalid woman and a baby were carried to safety when fire destroyed the four-room frame dwelling of Mrs. Ella Morrow, 33, of Jack's Run road, Ross Township, late yesterday.

Grace Coleman, 28, invalided for three years, was carried from the yard, where she had been tending the baby, to a nearby hillside by Mrs. Morrow, her sister. Dick Morrow, 1 year old, was carried to safety by neighbors.

The blaze was of undetermined origin. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

GIRL AIDS FIGHT ON PARALYSIS

While a 13-year-old girl was in the Children's Hospital giving her blood for a serum to combat infantile paralysis, five mild cases of the disease have been reported in Coraopolis, it was announced by the board of health.

Every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, according to Henry N. Holdren, president of the board. The oldest of the victims is a boy of 10.

The girl giving her blood is Jean Osborne, of Glen Willard, near Coraopolis. Crippled by the paralysis 10 years ago, she was having a cast put on her leg in the hospital when asked for the donation.

Helen Lee Worthing Committed to Home

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Helen Lee Worthing, former Follies beauty, pleaded guilty in Psychopathic Court yesterday to a violation of parole by use of narcotics and was committed to a Santa Monica rest home for an indefinite period by Superior Judge T. C. Gould. She was arrested a few days ago.

The marriage of Miss Worthing to Dr. Eugene C. Nelson, Negro physician, was annulled a year ago. She was adjudged mentally ill and placed on probation several months ago.

Peanut Fragment In Lung Fatal To Boy, 2

Septic lobar pneumonia developing from a peanut which lodged in his lung was listed on the Coroner's records today as the cause of the death of Clifford Van Tine, Jr., 2, of Parker street, Verona.

The boy was taken to Presbyterian Hospital July 7. Part of the nut kernel had been removed by a surgeon, but an attempt to remove the remainder failed, the Coroner's report said.

Clifford choked on the peanut ...ter taking it from the icing of a cake.

CLIP REMOVED, BABY SAVED

STEUBENVILLE, O., Aug. 19.—Eight-month-old Paul Gruskovich is recovering in Ohio Valley Hospital today following a midnight operation that removed a metal spring clip from his throat.

Left in care of a neighboring child while his mother, Mrs. Mary Gruskovich, of 838 Gilbert avenue, Follansbee, W. Va., shopped, the baby obtained a Christmas tree ornament and put it in his mouth. He chewed the glass bauble and spit it out. The metal piece of spring wire that formed the clip lodged in the baby's throat.

Rushed to the hospital, efforts were made to remove the spring, and then Dr. A. J. Guerinot, of Pittsburgh, was summoned. He arrived shortly before midnight and soon had the wire out of the baby's throat.

Dr. Guerinot said the spring was about an inch and a half long and had spread about three-fourth's of an inch, the extended prongs being upward in the child's throat.

Man Quizzed in Death Of Woman Released

Louis Carricato, 35, of Clifton avenue, Sharpsburg, was released yesterday by the coroner for lack of evidence in connection with the death of Mrs. Anna Izbrand, 34, in her home, 204 Fifty-fourth street, Wednesday.

Carricato had been held for questioning by detectives who said he had quarreled with Mrs. Izbrand when she returned from her brother's birthday party early Wednesday.

Jessie Goes on Stage At $2,500 Per Week

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Jessie B. Costello, acquitted this week in Salem of the poison slaying of her husband, has signed a vaudeville contract for 10 weeks, Samuel H. Berger, of New York, announced.

Berger said the attractive widow would open in a New York theater next Friday at a salary of $2,500 a week.

JAILED PASTOR LEADS IN SONG

ANGOLA, Ind., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Apparently seeking to forget his troubles in song, the Rev. Sidney H. Beauchamp, 26, former pastor of the Nine Mile (Ind.) United Brethren Church, today had organized a quartet among fellow inmates of the Steuben County Jail, where he is held on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 17-year-old girl.

The young woman, Miss Geneva Bradbury, was in custody and the pastor's wife, Mrs. Phyllis Beauchamp, 26, also charged with contributing to delinquency, was free under bond.

The charges against the three were contained in an affidavit sworn out by Miss Bradbury's mother.

The accused pastor, following his arrest, declared that he had brought the Bradbury girl into his home to better her environment. He denied the charges against him.

Mrs. Beauchamp told authorities her husband was infatuated with the girl but fearing for his reputation, she had refused to complain.

Garment Strike Looms in Midwest

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—A strike of 10,000 Midwest garment workers was threatening today. The strike was voted last night by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in protest against refusal of employers to meet their demands for what they termed equitable working hours and wages.

FAMILY SPEEDS TO ILL KING

Universal Service.

VIENNA, Aug. 19.—Members of the Rumanian royal family hastened yesterday to the bedside of King Carol, reported seriously ill at Sinaia Castle, his summer residence on the Black Sea.

The King and his 11-year-old son, Crown Prince Michael, were stricken suddenly yesterday while attending Rumanian naval maneuvers. They were taken ill with a high fever, believed to be typhoid. Michael was reported better today.

Dowager Queen Marie, Carol's mother; Princess Ileana, his youngest sister, and Archduke Anton, her husband, left their villa near Vienna for Bucharest en route to Sinaia.

They are understood to have received a report that Carol's condition had grown alarming.

Sheriff Balks Photos Of 'Poison Lawyer'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—A defense move to get pictures to bear out a charge that officers beat Mark H. Shank, Akron, O., attorney accused of killing four persons with poison, to force a confession was blocked by the sheriff's department here.

Shank was photographed yesterday in the county jail shortly after the arrival of his wife, attorney, former Judge E. H. Boylan, the Rev. Father J. L. Waldhisen and Anthony Rock, a friend from Akron.

Sheriff L. B. Branch, in whose custody Shank was placed for safe keeping, ordered the negatives seized on grounds neither he nor authorities of Saline County, which has jurisdiction in the case, authorized the photographs. Officers at Hot Springs who announced the purported confession denied force was used.

The next move of the defense was not disclosed, but Judge Boylan said a statement would be issued, indicating Shank would repudiate the confession and plead insanity.

Victims of the poisoning, Alvin Colley, a former investigator for Shank, Mrs. Colley and two young sons, were buried after a joint funeral service at Malvern yesterday. A third child, Clyde, 3, who survived the poison, allegedly administered at a picnic, was still in the Malvern Hospital today.

Carole, Divorced, Holds Hollywood Blameless

Universal Service.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Aug. 19.—"Don't blame Hollywood for the failure of our marriage—it just happened," said Carole Lombard, possessor of a properly attested and recorded divorce decree from William Powell, today and forthwith hopped off by plane for the film capital.

Soon after she filed her complaint today she was telling her troubles to Judge C. J. Guild. The judge refused to hold a secret hearing.

Miss Lombard needed but six minutes to tell what constituted "extreme mental cruelty" on the part of the screen star.

Powell did not contest the action.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 19.—(Universal.)—As Carole Lombard stepped from an airplane at United Airport three hours after her Nevada divorce today from William Powell, she wanly smiled and said in the accepted Hollywood manner:

"We still are the best of friends and both Bill and I hope to continue that friendship which is based on mutual respect and admiration. Our careers demanded that our marriage be dissolved."

CATHOLIC CENTRAL VEREIN AND WOMEN'S UNION MEET

OPEN MEETING TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Both the seventy-eighth annual convention of the Catholic Central Verein and the seventeenth annual convention of the National Catholic Women's Union, meeting jointly in the Fort Pitt Hotel, continues today with the reception and registration of delegates.

A second meeting of the committee on Catholic action, "steering committee" for the convention, was held at 9:30 o'clock this morning in Parlor D. This afternoon, the executive board of the Catholic Women's Union, headed by Mrs. Sophia Wavering, of Illinois, national president, meets in the Gold Room.

DINNER TONIGHT

Dinner tonight will be attended by all members of the executive committee, spiritual directors, and presidents of state organizations in the Assembly Room. William A. Boerger, president of the Minnesota state league, will speak on "Catholic Youth in Our Organization."

A reception for all delegates will follow in the English Room, while the Verein executive committee meets in the Assembly Room.

OPEN MEETING

The first general open meeting of the two conventions is set for tomorrow in St. Augustine's Parish Hall, Thirty-seventh and Butler streets. Frank Stifter, chairman of the local committee and Mayor John S. Herron will make addresses of welcome at 9:00 a. m. to which Willibald Eibner, national Verein president, New Ulm, Minn., and Mrs. Wavering will respond. The appointment of committees and presentation of a membership banner will follow.

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of Pittsburgh diocese, will be the celebrant of a Pontifical high mass in St. Augustine's Church at 10:30. The Rev. H. J. Steinhagen, of Philadelphia, will preach the sermon. A mass meeting of the two conventions is scheduled for Carnegie Library Hall at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Speakers will be the Rev. H. J. Miller, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and the Very Rev. Sigmund Cratz, provincial, Capuchin Order.

The Story of Joseph -:- CHAPTER VII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

For seven years after Joseph was made Governor of Egypt, as had been foretold in the dream that Joseph interpreted for Pharaoh, Egypt prospered. By order of Joseph, all the farmers of the land brought all they could spare of their bountiful crops of grain, corn and the fruit and stored it away in mighty storehouses.

Then there came the seven lean years that had been prophesied in the dream, and everywhere except in Egypt there was bitter famine. But in Egypt, when people cried for bread Pharaoh sent them to Joseph, and Joseph ordered that the storehouses should be opened, and that food be sold to the starving people.

Dr. L. D. Spaugy, superintendent of the Pittsburgh district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will conduct devotional exercises and M. D. Galbreath will preside. Raymond T. Griffin, of the quartet of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, will be precentor and soloist, with Earl Mitchell as pianist. Services will be broadcast over WWSW.

ECHO SERVICE AT EMORY

The fifth annual Institute Echo Service will be held by young people of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue at 6:45 p. m. tomorrow. Pittsburgh Conference Epworth League delegates who attended the Epworth League Institute at Newton-Hamilton, Pa., last month and in former years will be present.

More than 500 young people are expected to attend this group meeting, representing a membership of 15,000. The general theme, "Living for Jesus" will be developed by the Rev. Homer Clark, former dean of the institute. The Zion Male Quartet will sing and Franklin Brown, president of the Young People of Emory, will preside at the meeting.

Shields' Political Review On WCAE

Mark Shields, political editor of the Sun-Telegraph, describes the status of the various mayoralty candidates, speaking over WCAE at 6 this evening.

The Globe-Trotter, voice of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, broadcasts the day's news over WCAE and WJAS at 9:05 a. m. and 12:15 p. m.; over WCAE at 2:15 and 6:30 p. m.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Paul Gannon offers the familiar "Star of Love" as the highspot of his 6:45 "Songs at Eventide."

Like blues singers? Listen to Mickey Bell in an early evening songfest.

Immediately following Miss Bell, listeners will hear unusual piano arrangements by Herbert Fritsche.

Eddie Peyton has several more old favorites included in his 11:30 dance program.

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

I can't take the tremendous responsibility of satisfying this customer who just wrote in about her baby. I'll have to leave it up to you. A lady from Uniontown writes:

"I would like to name my baby Nira but I am at a loss to know whether it is a name for a boy or a girl."

Maybe we ought to know whether the baby is a boy or girl.

At 15 he made his debut as a concert accompanist with Hans Kindler, 'cellist. A year later he played the piano in a pit orchestra in Philadelphia, after which he joined Meyer Davis' orchestra. His first organ job was at the Stanley (Philadelphia) where he started to acquire his reputation.

Evidently you're thinking of another Lew White.

Cliff Hall, Baron's 'Sharlie,' Badly Hurt in Auto Crash

By AIRCASTER

The malevolent genii who see to it that bad breaks are mixed generally with the good ones, seem to have turned their evil-eyes toward radio. They have dealt out two tough blows within several weeks, which possibly may stir the sympathies of the customers.

The latest victim is "Sharlie," whom you may remember as the sometimes incredulous fellow who became famous by listening to the tall tales of the baron Munchausen, otherwise Jack Pearl who is now in Hollywood, clowning on the film lots.

There was a slip-up before Pearl and Sharlie, who normally is Cliff Hall, left for the coast. In the true Hollywood manner, somebody had forgotten to write Hall into the movie. There was a great deal of trouble about straightening it all out, but finally, Hall was made a character in the script and all seemed well.

Mr. Hall

But the bad break came the other day, when, somewhat in emulation of the ill-fated Jean Malin, Sharlie, while driving his car, skidded over an embankment, and from what the boys in the West tell me, he is in very bad shape, and is definitely out of the film, which was to have been one of his best breaks.

Annette, Too

We have heard of the illness of Annette Hanshaw, which has taken her to a sanitarium and indefinitely out of the cast of WCAE's "Showboat." But that was a relatively unimportant matter to her.

For years, she had dreamed of the time when her name would be up in lights on Broadway. Her rise in radio has not been meteoric, but steady.

She won a place, alongside Lanny Ross, in the "Showboat." And after that, she deemed herself qualified to do something on the stage.

Then came the big opportunity—one just like Sharlie's. A Broadway theater booked her to begin a week on the stage yesterday.

But the bad break came, and Annette is in a hospital, wondering why, at the psychological moment, an evil genius had to mix in with her affairs.

'Mother-In-Law' On 3 Stations

"Mother-in-Law," dramatized over WCAE and two other nearby stations this evening, pictures what happens when three different types of in-laws visit their newlywed children.

Adapted from a story in tomorrow's American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, "Mother-in-Law" is heard on WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., at 5:45 p. m.; WMMN, Fairmont, W. Va., 7 p. m. and WCAE, Pittsburgh, 7:45 p. m.

Prof. A.W. Blackwood To Preach Tomorrow

Andrew W. Blackwood, professor of homiletics at Princton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J., will speak tomorrow in the Third Presbyterian Church, South Negley avenue. At 11 a. m. he will preach on "The Power of God in the Lives of Men." At 8 p. m. he will speak on "Why Do Good People Suffer?" Prof. Blackwood has been lecturing at the Grove City Bible School during August. Edgar A. Sprague will be soloist at both services.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Maytair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Just because we've had a new deal doesn't mean that the day of benefits is over, and that many institutions, such as hospitals, still don't need help.

The Pittsburgh Hospital is going to have a benefit August 26 at the Arnold School Theater, when the Pittsburgh Summer Playhouse will give "Three to Make Ready."

Student nurses will be aides, and a group of girls will arrange the Mt. Mercy Academy's share in the theater party and another, the Winchester School's.

Aides of Mt. Mercy will be Mary Grace Iacovetti, Margaret Herman and Kathryn Knee; for Winchester, Peggy Colbert and Jane Bell, whose pictures appear at the right.

Other workers for the play will be Betty Dalbey, Ruth Simpson, and Miss Veronica McDermott, general chairman.

Return From Sea

Home from the sea are the William Christopher Robinsons, of Sewickley Heights, who've been on a yatching trip on the northeastern shore.

Alex Laughlin Robinson has been at his parents' home — the William Christopher Robinsons—while his family is in Canada.

Mrs. Alex Robinson and her two sons, Alex, Jr., and Brooks, are at Forest Nook, Ontario, visiting Mrs. Robinson's mother, Mrs. F. F. Brooks. Mrs. Robinson spent her girlhood summers there. She'll be at home after Labor Day.

Forest Nook is in the popular Ahmic Lake district. Nearby are Mrs. J. C. Oliver with her son, Ledlie Watt Young, Mrs. Young and the children, Elsie Oliver Young and Ledlie W. Young, Jr. Mrs. Oliver's sons, John C. Oliver, Jr., and David Oliver are also with her.

Southwestern District Now Holds First Place

The Armstrong County Federation of Women's Clubs, which has just come into the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, makes the Southwestern district first in the number of county federations.

A number of past presidents of county federations will assist Mrs. B. H. Thompson, of New Kensington, who heads the committee for the past president's dinner at the State Federation convention here in October. On her committee are Mrs. J. I. Hook, Greene County; Mrs. H. J. Fox, Allegheny; Mrs. H. L. Pedicord, Washington, and Mrs. Samuel N. Warden, Westmoreland County.

Minister to Officiate At Daughter's Wedding

Tonight at 8 o'clock Miss Louise Weiler will become the bride of Homer Wagner in the Ohio Street Methodist Episcopal Church, of which her father is the pastor. She is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William Weiler, of East McIntyre avenue, North Side, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wagner, of Canton, Mo.

The Rev. Mr. Weiler and the Rev. Dr. Emil Klotz, district superintendant, will officiate. Miss Weiler is to be attended by her sister, Miss Pearl Weiler, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Marjory Claire, Miss Phyllis Schaale, Miss Rose McCann and Miss Martha Stinson, of Evansville, Ind.

The best man will be Donald Rohrer and ushers will include James States, Heywood Stanley, Paul Koch and James Little.

There is to be a reception in the church and later Mr. and Mrs. Wagner will motor to Chicago and Missouri. They will reside here upon their return.

Mrs. G. W. Crawford To Give Gay 90's Party Aug. 29

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—The coming week will be celebrated as Old White Week at The Greenbrier, preliminary to Robert E. Lee Week August 28 to September 2, and will open Tuesday with a tea given by the directors of the Old White Art Colony for Prince Raoul of Cattelica, Italian baritone, who will give a recital of Italian folk songs August 24. The Old White Ball August 25 is another feature of the week.

Among the entertainments arranged for Lee Week is a bridge and tea at the President's Cottage, occupied by seven Presidents of the U. S. as a Summer White House, and opened last year as a museum. Hostesses will be Mrs. W. E. R. Byrne, of Charleston, president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Miss Anne V. Nann, president of the Virginia division U. D. C., Mrs. Wiliam Vaught, vice-president-general of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, and others. Miss Mary Glenn Buchanon, of Scranton, Pa., a direct descendant of President James Buchanon, one of the cottage's early occupants, will attend the function. Mrs. George W. Crawford of Pittsburgh is planning a Gay Nineties Party for August 29. Lillian Britt Heinsohn, and Nell Britt Taber will give a recital in costumes of 1860 of Southern ballads and Negro Spirituals, August 30, and an act from Alice in Wonderland will be given by the pupils of the Graham-Eckes School at a lawn party August 31. The Lee Monument Ball will close the week September 1.

On Labor Day there will be a polo match between the Greenbriar and Middleburg (Va.) polo teams. A second polo match will take place September 10 between the Pittsburgh polo team and the Greenbrier team.

Mrs. R. H. Buchanon, of Scranton, gave a supper dance for 40 guests at Kates Mountain Club recently for her daughter, Miss Mary Glena Buchanon.

Arriving at the Greenbrier this week to remain through the next fortnight were Mrs. W. Norman McMullin and Miss Elizabeth Y. McMullin, of Bryn Mawr; Miss Margaret Devereux, of Villa Nova; Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Norton, of Overbrook, Pa.; Miss Mary Nicholson, of Somerset, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Worthington, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. James Swetlock, of Johnstown, Pa.

Also W. S. Arbuthnot, R. M. Martin, R. A. Follansbee, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bialas, R. R. Jardine and W. O. Preston, of Pittsburgh. W. S. McClintock, of Pittsburgh was a guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Crawford. Dwight Winter and B. J. Jarrett, of Pittsburgh were here for a few days of golf.

Mrs. Robert N. Warmack gave a dinner for nearly 30 guests Thursday, in honor of the birthday of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Crawford. Pier Dannals, of Pittsburgh, Prothonotary for the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania passed the week here. J. T. Tierney is expected from Pittsburgh August 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., have taken one of the Greenbrier cottages, and will come with their family from Nassau, for September.

Dormont Mothers' Club Group Heads Announced

When the Dormont Mothers' Club begins its year on September 26 in the New Century clubhouse, the year book will be outlined by the program chairman, Mrs. J. E. Crawford.

The Sunday School orchestra of the Second Presbyterian Church, with Joseph Southworth directing, will play several numbers.

It's a Dizzy Trip To Cross These Economic Maps

-By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER-

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 19.—Those Wall Street fever charts were good practice for reading the economic maps.

You follow the minimum price line to the maximum costs scale. The point at which those two meet is now the world's most famous road crossing.

Continue along the farm commodities and retail merchandise and follow the dip to the purchasing power of the ultimate consumer. If you haven't made a complete loop by that time it must be because your steering gear is jammed.

It is a tough job in mathematics. Over forty years ago we tried to figure out what a load of hay weighed without the hoss and wagon. We might have graduated if the paper had been wide enough.

But we are doing pretty good on this wage balancing problem. If you don't understand it, just jump on our back and we will carry you past the sixth decimal point.

Miss Helen Borland Weds James W. Howell

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Borland, of Washington, Pa., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Van Eman Borland, to James W. Howell, of Boston and Pittsburgh. The wedding took place in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York yesterday at 12 o'clock noon. Mr. and Mrs. Howell will make their home here after September 15.

Partners Battle; One Hurt, One Held

Silas Simpson and James W. Hanlon have been partners in the trucking business at 628 Thorn street, across the reet from the Sewickley Borough Hall, for the last 28 years.

Last night they had a business disagreement, police said. Today Simpson was in the Valley Hospital at Sewickley with injuries and Hanlon was at liberty on $500 bail on an aggravated assault and battery charge, according to police.

Child Falls 15 Feet From Porch, Injured

A victim of a 15-foot fall from the back porch of her home, Florence Zysk, 4, of 141 Pius street, was in a South Side hospital today with a possible fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

Florence, one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zysk, climbed onto a chair near the railing, while at play, lost her balance and fell.

Crafton Club Year Book Promises Season of Varied Programs

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Widely varied is the miscelleaneous program promised in the new year books of the Crafton Heights Woman's Club. Beginning September 21 with a covered dish luncheon and a talk by C. H. Lehman on "Modern Trends in Marketing," the club will next celebrate the joint president's day of the Brookline Civic Club and the Chartiers Valley Association in the Brookline Methodist Episcopal Church.

An old home day, when the early days of Crafton Heights will be reviewed, and a benefit card party at Spear's are October's events, while listed on November's calendar are a charity sewing, a play and American Home Sunday observance.

The club's own president's day is set for January 11, and the same month the women will visit the Better Home Exhibit in the Gulf Building. A talk by Miss Aleta Steele, election, a program on "Noted American Women" (Mary Roberts Rinehart, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Grace Morrison Poole), a visit to Torrence House, a music day and the review of the year, together with installation of officers, will round out the season.

Officers are Mrs. Leslie J. Dodds, president; Mrs. R. A. Putnam, vice president; Mrs. J. J. Pannabaker, recording; Mrs. George Taylor, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Gertrude Kirkland, treasurer.

Ingomar Student Finds Romance In Vienna

A meeting in Vienna has led to the engagement of an Ingomar girl and a Tonawanda (N. Y.) man, both of whom were students in that romantic old capital this past winter.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Carl Van der Voort, of Ingomar, are announcing the betrothal of their young student daughter, Miss Ellen Van der Voort to Loftus Becker, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Becker, of Tonawanda, N. Y.

Miss Van der Voort, who, with Miss Bessie Hubach, went abroad to study music, with the novelist Sinclair Lewis and Mrs. Lewis as their distinguished chaperones, met her fiance at the home of Frau De Schey-Riesz, of Vienna, a friend of Mrs. Lewis.

Miss Van der Voort is a graduate of the music department of Carnegie Institute of Technology and continued her 'cello studies in Vienna this past year. Mr. Becker studied at the University of Vienna this past year following his graduation from Harvard.

The Van der Voort-Becker wedding will take place in the spring.

Democratic Club Formed By Mt. Lebanon Women

At an organization meeting and tea held yesterday in Mrs. Peter Van Duyl's home, Cedar boulevard, the Mt. Lebanon Democratic Women's Club was formed. Mrs. Van Duyl was elected chairman; Mrs. A. J. Frost, secretary; Mrs. Charles E. Rooney, Jr., treasurer, and Mrs. Virgil Caputo, publicity chairman.

A program was given, including violin numbers by Stephen Pillischer, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Dodds at the piano, readings by Mrs. Edward F. Laurence and a talk on the fall campaign by J. Howard Gleason. About 75 women were present.

MISSING GIRLS, YOUTH SOUGHT

Police today sought Lucy Smith, 17, and her sister, Anna, 13, who vanished from their home, 1217 High street, North Side, while their stepfather, Frank Smith, a huckster, was absent yesterday.

When Smith returned home, the girls were gone, and so were their clothes and most of the bed sheets, he told North Side police. The girls told neighbors they were going to Illinois. The neighbors noted the license number of the car in which they left. Police learned it belonged to a youth in Mars. They began a search for him, too.

Machine Shop Man, 83, Found Stricken

Semi-conscious, John Ebel, 83, was found on the floor of his machine shop, rear 27 South Fourteenth street, and taken to South Side Hospital last night, according to a police report.

A neighbor, Margaret Sazezka, alarmed at not seeing Ebel all day, peered through the shop window and saw him prostrate. She summoned police. Ebel was said to have suffered a heart attack.

Judge Congratulates Brother, Candidate

In a telegram from Atlantic City, N. J., to his brother, John W. Patterson, candidate for Council in the Republican primaries, Judge Frank P. Patterson congratulated him on drawing fifth place on the ballot yesterday. His message urged all friends and "right thinking citizens" to support his brother's candidacy.

Greentree Parish Holds Picnic Dinner

An old-fashioned dinner will be served at the third annual picnic of St. Margaret's Parish, Greentree, this afternoon at the school grounds. Francis McKeon is general chairman and Mrs. William C. Baldesberger heads the women preparing the dinner.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

The William G. Costins have a most picturesque cabana at the Hotel Admiral, Cape May, N. J.

The cabanas, colorful striped canvas affairs, are grouped in a crescent about the hotel's salt water pool.

They contain a sitting room, dressing room and shower, and have a porch, awning-shaded, furnished with tables and chairs. Here the cabana lords and their guests can lunch in their bathing costumes, and after lunch they are ready for a dip in the pool or a sun bath on the white sandy beach.

Bureau of Nurses To Give All-Day Party Monday

The Official Bureau of Registered Nurses will sponsor an all-day round of festivities Monday at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Among the members of the advisory council of the bureau supporting the event are Dr. George W. Wright, president of the Pittsburgh Academy of Medicine; Dr. Thomas Carroll, Dr. Ernest Willetts and Dr. George Greer, of the Allegheny County Medical Society; Judge Thomas H. Marshall, Edgar J. Kaufmann, Charles Wolfe, Miss Helen Rauh, Mrs. Alan Shenk, Joseph H. Bialas and Dr. George Crieg.

At the party the St. Francis Hospital Alumnae will entertain the 40 members of the graduating class.

Patrick J. Corr, swimming instructor of the University of Pittsburgh, will be in charge of the swimming meet, the trophy for which Mayor John S. Herron donated.

MAN, GIRL, 17, DISAPPEAR

MONONGAHELA, Pa., Aug. 19.—The State Highway Patrol today was asked to search for John Dencheck, 28, of Gallitzen, Forward Township, Allegheny County, who is reported to have disappeared last night.

James Broggi, candidate for justice of the peace in Forward Township, in asking that search be made for his brother-in-law, said Dencheck was accompanied by Broggi's daughter, Doris, 17, Monongahela High School graduate.

According to Broggi, they were seen in Dencheck's auto near Baidland, early last evening. Dencheck is the father of two, Jean 7, and Marie 5.

Both men are employed in Donora steel works.

Good Government Unit Backs Lindsay

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for judge of Common Pleas Court, has received the indorsement of the Good Government Organization of Allegheny County, the officers, Dr. W. L. McLean, chairman; Levy Campbell, secretary, and John Batch, treasurer announced last night.

Mr. Lindsay will speak at the Hungarian day outing at Kennywood Park late this afternoon. He will address two North Side meetings tomorrow. They are the Hungarian Harmony Singing Society, at Summer Hill Grove, and the Linden Post, American Legion, at Cook's Grove, Woods Run avenue and Bismarck street.

Pastor to Preach Farewell Sermon

The Rev. Charles T. Sturgis will preach a farewell sermon to his congregation at the Union Gospel Church, Franklin avenue, Wilkinsburg, on Sunday, August 27. At 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. tomorrow he will preach on "A Spirit Filled Life."

NECKLINES AND SHOULDERS GET NEW FASHION TREATMENT

THEY SAY someone came out last week with a new neckline. And the day before that with a new shoulder. What's it all about? In the past few weeks, in manufacturers' showrooms viewing collections, we've probably seen hundreds of variations. Some express the new feeling, or what they interpret as the new feeling, by pulling shoulders up and out, frightfully exaggerated. Others tend more to simplicity, regarding the fashion for fancy tops a dangerous one to be toyed with. These designers seem to have the right idea.

IN A SWIRLING sea churning with contradictory ideas, it is comforting to know just what is really smart and what to demand of shoulders this coming season. It is admitted the emphasis is above the waist. But the lingering idea that one must go "tricky" is not smart. Chic women never recognize trickiness, but hug to the modified developments of accepted fashion influences.

TO THEM, softer outlines are smarter than sharply pointed ones. Height and breadth is approved of if they don't go too far. Fin shoulders, corded shallow yokes that extend over the tops of sleeves, upstanding tucks, military epaulets, buttondown tabs, stiffened evening cap sleeves, padded London shoulders, wide square collars, new expressions of the tray shoulder, strips of material placed horizontally across the shoulders—all these are good. But in modified measures, never in strong doses. Too much of any good thing will kill it in a flash.

THREE OUTSTANDING good examples are sketched for you. One highly individualistic designer shows only straight sleeves, or those with fullness at the elbow. However, her clothes are not typical. Not only dress houses, but knitwear manufacturers are shoulder-conscious these days. They all experiment with the same ideas.

SINCE FASHION is divided on the point, some widen the shoulders, others merely emphasize them. One woman, considered among the world's best dressers, has her own interpretation. She wears a wide brilliantly-spangled kerchief at the neckline of neutral and black evening ensembles. One such bright note draws the eyes to the shoulders, which satisfies her. Many gowns are accentuated by enormous chiffon scarfs, dropped over the tops of the arms to gain width.

NECKLINES ARE mostly high, but softened by slight cowl effects, ruchings, etc. The result is the return of longer necklaces, particularly demanded by women who look better in V-necklines. Many 18-inch ropes of pearls are seen. And sparkling brooches. Often a severely simple dress relies on one touch of jewelry to set off exquisite new fabrics. We saw a gown of this type the other day made of dull black woolen, with a fine piece of turquoise, shaped like an arrow, in the folds near the neck. It lent the wearer a distinct personality. One should look into ideas like that.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Return

The inn looks strange—I have been long away,
But here they wait—the lads who form my clan,
No leers, no censure—words are golden gay
The while we lift our tankards—man to man;
Well, here our pence can still the biting pain
When love fades down the highways of the night.
And I have come back, time and time again,
To learn how many wrongs can make a right.

I know the answer ever is the same,
I know the gaping terror of the dawn,
But I will grit my teeth and play the game
And gain the pride of one who carries on
When all is lost except the memory
Of one who was so very dear to me.

—Don Wahn.

Ride 'im Cowboy!

When Will Rogers, one of the better squelchers, is "topped," that is news, indeed. Tom Mix is credited with snapping back at Rogers recently, in an interview.

It happened when the interviewer called Tom's attention to Will's column in which the clown said that he laughed every time he thought of Tom Mix on tour "co-starring with a horse!"

"Well, all right," Mix grinned, "but did you see Will in that movie called 'State Fair?' I may co-star with a horse, but I ain't yit gotten where I have to co-star with a pig!"

The Retort Terrible

One of the dramatic critics, who referred to a certain ham as a "bum actor," received a curt note demanding an apology or an explanation. The critic paragraphed in reply as follows:

"I am pleased to explain and apologize—for our proofreader. Believing I had omitted the word 'actor' he inserted it in my copy. A grievous error, but I assure you it shall not happen again."

Oh, Fooofff!

During our visit to the Far West one critic nastied that she saw us at the Cocoanut Grove using a pencil and paper to jot down notes.

"Mr. Winchell," she paragraphed, "apparently doesn't know that in Hollywood it simply isn't being done in public!"

Apparently that accounts for most of the inaccuracy out there.

Merciless Truth

Mickey Alpert, whose songs fall on willing ears at the Riviera, remarks that the NRA stickers in the local music publishing offices have a different meaning for the starving songwriters, who argue that NRA stands for No Royalties Anymore.

By Way of Report

We make a note of it now because it might prevent a lot of unnecessary grief for all concerned.

A well-known femme star, who has been obnoxious in public by scrapping with other women, is supposed to have sent anonymous letters to a woman's husband. In which she related that the man's wife was unfaithful to him, etc. The husband turned the anonymous mail over to his wife and let the matter drop there.

The wife, however, had her suspicions. She called in a handwriting expert and told him the probable source. Comparing specimens, the expert told his client he was sure her original suspicions were correct. A suit for slander and big damages will follow the next vicious letter.

And so this is jotted down to notify the sender that they are hep—and to warn her that no matter how clean you go into a scrap—everybody comes out of it a little dirtier.

Shawt Story

Jack Arthur reminds us that columnists weren't popular even when George Bernard Shaw was columning. At that time Oscar Wilde was the wit and favorite, and he belittled Shaw's stuff.

"You must admit, though," a mutual pal said, "that Shaw is going to be a success. Already he is on the road to making himself a lot of enemies."

"I wouldn't say that," replied Wilde, "he hasn't become prominent enough yet to have enemies. But none of his friends like him."

In Case You Didn't Know

The news from Cuba has upset local newspaper followers, who are not acquainted with the proper pronunciation of the deposed Cuban chief's name. Quips about him are misleading. It isn't pronounced as in "Machado about nothing" or "Mikado," or McAdoo.

It is as Bruce MacFarlane points out—like: "Me and Machado."

The Morning Mail

"Dear Winchell," writes Roe Fulkerson, of Washington, "you of course were reared on the pavements of Manhattan. You never went to college or anything, but Rudy Vallee did! You probably wouldn't know that Lawrence Hope who wrote 'India Love Lyrics' wasn't a man but a woman, but Rudy should know it.

"At any rate in July while on the air Rudy told millions that some day he hoped he could meet Mr. Hope and tell him how much pleasure he had given him with his poetry. I was just thinking, Walter. Wouldn't it be nice if Mr. George Eliot could be there with them?"

Or Miss Zola.

In Fewer Words

They were advising a hard worker to take it a little easier.

"You now can afford," they told him, "to coast on your rep."

"The trouble with coasting," advised a has-been, who tried it, "is that you can't depend on your brakes."

The Topper

It was recently told how the Marx Brothers once got temperamental with the manager of their first show, and that they were spanked with this rebuke:

"Don't forget it took you guys eight years to come from Syracuse to New York and it only takes eight hours to get from New York to Syracuse!"

We forgot to add that Groucho replied:

"That's the trouble. We like Syracuse!"

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I been working day and night with this fellow Johnson on a code for comedians. He claims that Senators and Congressmen comes under our code. I claim theirs is a separate union, that they are professionals, and in a class by themselves, and that us amateur comedians should not be classed with 'em.

Will Rogers

I hate to defy this NRA, but I am going to carry my fight to the country, because according to his code, it would give work to more Senators and Congressmen, and I claim that's the only thing we don't want any more of. So it looks like I am really the first one to lock horns with this tough guy, Johnson, but I believe I got the people with me.

Yours, Will.

Crooks Love And Lose In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

For three years the chief of Scotland Yard had been planning to get the jewel thieves whose gang was headed by Clive Brook, who is really a good actor. But he has to be the bad actor in "Midnight Club," while George Raft, he of the mahogany countenance, is the smart American detective and even wins the love of Helen Vinson, who is the pure and lovely moll of the diamond thieves.

Mr. Seibel

The story is by E. Phillips Oppenheim—and it is full of excitement—but the only part that is novel is the way they get the jewels out of a jewelry store safe without breaking it open, and the way in which they ship the loot to America in antique vases.

Besides Clive Brook, there is Sir Guy Standing, also an actor, and Ferdinand Gottschalk—so why did Helen Vinson fall in love with George Raft? It would be as easy to fall in love with Clark Gable—but these are the mysteries of Hollywood and the female heart.

It's a fairly thrilling and well-put-together crook and crime romance. But not nearly as funny as the comic of those two inimitable clowns, Laurel and Hardy, who arrest the chief of police himself in his own home.

Then we have a mighty amusing adventure of "Flip" with wild redskins, to make up for a decidedly stupid "Hollywood on Parade."

Which evens the score.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Latest developments in the Cuban crisis, showing returned order instead of chaos, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with a graphic description of the entire situation by the Globe Trotter. President De Cespedes is seen on the palace balcony, where he is cheered by a great crowd.

The running of America's greatest trotting classic, the Hambletonian, at Goshen, N. Y., for a purse of $40,000, is shown from start to finish. Mary Reynolds wins when Brown Berry stumbles and falls.

Uncle Sam's union with the police of various cities to fight racketeering and kidnaping, is outlined in the Senatorial inquiry held in New York.

In a stirring musical subject made in New York City, Phil Spitalny's Blue Eagle March is heard for the first time.

Mrs. Jessie Costello is shown leaving the courthouse at Salem, Mass., after her acquittal of the murder of her husband. A great crowd cheers the widow.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of Commodore Perry's opening of Japan to the world is celebrated on the deck of the United States cruiser Houston, where the crew is entertained with a quaint dance by geisha girls.

Reginald Brown is seen riding a bicycle car over a network of cables high over the whirlpool rapids below Niagara Falls.

Policemen act as judges of Uncle Robert's baby beauty contest in New York City.

Problem Film At Warner

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

"What Price Innocence," current film at the Warner, delivers the goods as advertised. It's a story of agony, stupidity and passion.

Or maybe it would be better to call it a lesson. Jean Parker plays the lithe and girlishly attractive heroine whose mother has never told her what are popularly known as the "facts" of life. She falls for a fellow whose only articulate line of love-making is the expression "I'm nuts about you." Soon it is evident that she has fallen too far.

The family doctor, Willard Mack, realest character in the show, has her taken to a sanitarium. Only then her prudish mother and ineffectual father begin to understand.

No doubt it is painfully true that there are parents as thick-headed as the heroine's in this world, but that doesn't add greatly to the show's dramatic value. It reaches its greatest strength in the climax, coming shockingly and suddenly after the girl is goaded by her shamed mother.

Aside from a clumsy attempt at symbolism, the directors have presented their lesson straightforwardly, not letting any subtleties creep in to confuse the moral. Propaganda against false innocence, it will appeal to others than the pure.

Two Pictures In Davis

By J. JAMES MOORE

Leila Hyams is faced with the tedious job of reforming her millionaire and playboy husband in "Sing, Sinner, Sing," now showing in the Davis and Sheridan Square. She is a famous torch singer on a gambling ship, where she is admired by the proprietor, Paul Lukas. Then she meets her husband-to-be.

Donald Dilliway, the devil-may-care playboy, and Leila elope, and in six weeks he forgets all about marriage vows. He is the host at one party after another, while his wife sits at home. In the end he is mysteriously slain, Leila goes on trial and is convicted—but that is when her former sweetheart comes back into the scene.

A newspaper sob-sister and a newsreel cameraman meet during an earthquake and eventually fall in love in the second feature on the bill, "Headline Shooter." Frances Dee, the news writer, tries to avoid William Gargan, cameraman, but he manages to keep right up with her. He even beats the time of her fiance, Ralph Bellamy.

Action aplenty takes place when Frances is kidnaped while covering a murder case. It takes the smart thought of William Gargan and his camera to rescue her. He shows how a real newsreel cameraman goes about his work as he shoots an earthquake, a brewery fire, a beauty pagent and a Mississippi River flood.

ADRIENNE AMES, SCREEN BEAUTY, AND BRUCE CABOT, GUESTS AT A DINNER DANCE IN HOLLYWOOD HOTEL

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Odds and Ends

LYING HERE in the hospital yesterday with nothing on my mind and a cast on my leg, an idea hit me suddenly. In years gone by, I tried to run an occasional contest that might interest readers. The ideas were many and varied.

One contest, for example, had to do with the finding of a new name for an Earl Carroll beauty. We found the new name, the girl was tagged with it—and she hasn't been heard of since. All of which went to prove how very much this column can accomplish once it sets out to do a thing.

Another contest was run on the question: "If you could pick four people to remain on a desert island for the rest of their lives, whom would you choose?" That was a honey, and drew a great response. As I remember it, the winner picked Hoover, Capone, Vallee and Aimee McPherson as his choices—plus some very excellent reasons.

I liked that contest because it was simple and to the point. There wouldn't be any point, however, in running another one like it these days. Everybody would pick the same four most unpopular people—and Adolf Hitler would unquestionably be all four.

The best contest I ever ran, though, was one that I brought out back in 1928—and drew some 35,000 replies from all over the nation. In short, it was as follows:

A beautiful showgirl is loved by two men. One is 30 years older than she is, and is a multi-millionaire. The other is a drummer in the theater orchestra, and is just about her own age.

The multi-millionaire can give her a gorgeous home, jewels, cars and all that goes with money. The drummer can give her nothing but a flat in Brooklyn—and all that goes with youth. Both men love her devotedly. Which one—for the greater happiness in the long run—should she marry?

A simple question, you see, but one that was seemingly of great interest to everyone. And, brothers and sisters, you should have seen some of those answers!

I finally awarded the prize to a woman who wrote a beautiful letter that urged the showgirl to marry the drummer and live for love. Personally, I would have advised the girl to marry the multi-millionaire. But my wife favored the poor man angle, and I had no intentiton of being hit over the head with the nearest plate.

So I permitted romance to triumph. Which was all right because it's only in imaginary stories that romance usually wins out . . .

All of which leads us to the idea that I was speaking of in the first paragraph when I so rudely interrupted myself. I think it's time for another contest. And if you don't mind, I'm going to make this one a little different from anything I've ever attempted before. Thus:

How would you like to write a Hellinger column? From many of the letters I've received over a period of years, there are any number of people who think they can do a far better job than I do—which is a situation that I don't doubt in the slightest. Their tough break is that they never got the chance.

Well, here is the one big opportunity. I'm going to write two paragraphs; any two paragraphs that come to mind. And if you feel like entering the contest, it's up to you to complete the story. In other words, with the exception of the first two paragraphs—which must be used by all contestants to start their stories—you are going to write a Hellinger column.

Are you ready? Good. Here are the first two paragraphs that must be used:

"Joe Green walked slowly in the direction of his home after a pretty dull day. Passing him, you would never give him a second glance. For Joe Green was so essentially the average man that a second glance was never necessary.

"Everything about the man spelled the average. The way his clothes fitted him. That plodding look in his eyes. The very manner in which he walked. Average; that was Joe Green. And it was a thousand to one that he would go through life exactly as he was."

That's the lead of the column; now it's up to you to finish it. What happened to Joe Green after that? It's up to you to shape the story. Turn it into a sob story, if you wish, or make it the gag type of yarn. It's up to you to do as you will.

You can make him a married man with three children, or you can keep him single. You can give him any line of business you choose. You can carry him through 50 years in your story, or you can kill him at the end of an hour. In other words, the character and the story are in your hands. Do as you will with them—but don't forget that the ending must pack a wallop.

This column usually consists of about 1,100 words. The two paragraphs I have given you can be counted as 100 words—so that you have 1,000 words left in which to tell your story. Try to keep it within that space and, if possible, have your manuscript typed.

The winning story gets a prize of $30 in cash, and the two stories that are considered next best will win $10 each. I will be the sole judge and I reserve the right, of course, to print the winning stories in this space.

Address your columns to Mark Hellinger, No. 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City. To give the folks all over the country plenty of time, the contest will not close until September 10, at midnight.

So you have your opportunity. Everybody wants to be a columnist—although why, goodness only knows. Try to bat out a column—or as many as you wish—on the lead I have provided. We'll all have a lot of fun. And who knows but I may dig up the star columnist of the future?

There's just one thing I'm worried about. Can you imagine what the public will do to me if I dig up another Winchell?. . .

LEE BROWN, the handsome producer, dropped in the other afternoon with a gag that might as well end the column for today. Lew must have been digging for this one, for he goes back to the days when things were booming in Florida and all prices were sky high.

Walking along the streets of Miami one morning, an actor ran across a man with a tiny black and tan dog. The actor had always admired the breed, so after asking the other man if he cared to sell, he inquired the price.

"He's a bargain," replied the dog owner. "You can buy him for $150,000 in cash."

The actor almost choked. He knew that all prices were high those days, he said, but $150,000 for a dog was fantastic. A few more words, and he left.

The following week he again encountered the dog owner. The actor inquired about the animal, and the other man stated that he had sold him.

"Got my price, too," he said happily. "Sold him for $150,000!"

"You don't say!" gasped the actor. "That's remarkable."

"Yes," replied the owner, "I made a real deal. I got $50 in cash and a $149,950 cat!" . . .

New Aerial Thriller For Kennywood

Kennywood Park will present the Ateno Brothers, aerial performers on new type equipment, beginning Sunday. Steel hoops whirling high in the air make a double arena for their balances and acrobatics. This act will be shown free every afternoon and night during the engagement. Benny Burton and his orchestra will play for the dance tonight in Kennywood's open air ballroom. Meredith Stump and his musicians come in Tuesday for a series of picnic dances.

Two Blonde Charmers Receive New Roles

Two of the screen's blonde charmers received new roles at the Paramount studios. Lyda Roberti, musical comedy actress currently engaged in making Paramount's "Torch Singer," will have a leading role in the film musical "Cruise to Nowhere," while Helen Twelvetrees, who was last seen in Paramount's "Disgraced," has been assigned to appear opposite George Raft in "The Trumpet Blows."

After Reno Will Come 'She Made Her Bed'

Carole Lombard's first role following her return from Reno, and her first role for Paramount in four months, will be in the Charles R. Rogers production, "She Made Her Bed." Ralph Murphy, now directing "Golden Harvest" for Rogers, will direct.

Stanley Film Has Howard As Hero

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

A melodramatic picture showing the heroic sacrifice of one man for the benefit of many others briefly describes "Captured," the current photoplay in the Stanley. Need for frankness compels the statement that it is a tragedy, that its high spot is quite kokumish, that its small amount of romance is not pleasant, and that its comedy is virtually nil. Outside of these handicaps "Captured" is all right, for the action is swift and dramatic and the principal characterizations are finely drawn by Leslie Howard, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Paul Lukas. The only two women in it are Margaret Lindsay and Joyce Coad.

Much of the action takes place in a German camp for war prisoners. Among them is Howard, young British officer, who can't understand why his wife, Monica, whom he had wedded after a brief wooing, doesn't write to him. Then Fairbanks, a fellow officer, is captured and is sent to the same camp. But he gets a letter from Monica, because, you see, they are in love. The situations is unbearable to him, and he resolves to escape, regardless of consequences. He does, but a girl is murdered on the night he cuts through the barriers to freedom, and the letter from Monica is found near-by. So Howard signs the German request to the British that the fugitive be returned to stand trial for murder.

Howard holds evidence that will save his comrade from the firing squad, but jealousy causes him to waver until just the last minute, after which he completes his act of renunciation in favor of his rival by arranging a mass escape, which, though it strikes one as impossible, still is thrilling.

Howard's portrayal of the one who is willing to lay down his life for another is stimulating, and Fairbanks does nicely in a rather moody part. Lukas is suave and natural as a German officer in command of the camp.

Pair Daughter With Will

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 19.—In all probability, the ingenue lead in Will Rogers' next picture will be Mary Howard, and, of course, you haven't forgotten that this is Will's own daughter, who adopted a stage name because she wanted to make her own way.

Seventeen years old, blonde and pretty, Mary recently won the admiration of Hollywood by getting herself a job in "My Weakness" before anyone knew her identity.

She did so well (Buddy De Sylva sings her praises loudly) that the studio asked her to take a rest for the role of Will's daughter in "There's Always Tomorrow." She came through this with flying colors, and there's a contract waiting if Will gives his okay.

The comedian is away from Hollywood on another of his trips, but as he knew of the test before his departure, the deal is as good as signed.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Should You Distrust Everyone Because You've Been Hurt?

Is it safe to trust people?

Or should we distrust everyone on sight—and keep them under suspicion until they've proved their innocence?

Fan's asking. She has had a bitter blow. Can she mend her broken heart, and save herself from further hurts, by refusing to believe in any man—by getting Mercenary and Hard-Boiled?

That's her present plan. Is she right—wise—strong?

Or only foolish, and weak and cowardly?

Here's her story. It's not a new one, nor is her notion new. But what sort of world would this be, for you and for me to live in, if we all let bad breaks make us like this:

Dear Elsie:

I've read several letters in your column lately, saying that Modern Men were no good. I see you don't agree with that idea. Well, you're wrong. I wouldn't trust one of them.

Once I was young and eager and idealistic. I dreamed of love and loyalty and happiness. I dreamed of the joyous home I would have some day, and the happy life I would have with the One Man.

LOYAL TO HUSBAND

Well, I thought I found him. He was good-looking. He had a good job, and some money of his own. We were married, and I was very happy—until I found out that he chased after every pretty girl he saw. I was dreadfully hurt, but I stuck to him for three years; then I found that he was maintaining another "home"—and I walked out.

I loved this man deeply. I was loyal to him. I trusted him. I believed in him with my whole soul when I went to the altar with him. I looked forward to a wonderful life together. I had been taught that such a life was possible—and now it is all in ruins. My heart is broken. I shall never trust anyone again.

Nor is my experience the only one I know of that is like that. My husband had a host of men friends, and they're all like him. They run around "having a good time," as they call it. "Living" is another way they have of expressing it. And two of the girls I grew up with married, only to meet with just about the same disaster.

I've learned my lesson. I'll never let any other man have the power to hurt me as this man did. I'll never trust any other man or believe in him. I'm not going to let myself be hurt again. I'm going to be wise.

There is a young man now who says he loves me. He is attractive. He seems to be nice, just as my husband did. He has just as convincing a way of courting me. He wants me to marry him. Maybe I shall. I don't know.

But I'll never let myself believe in him. "Once burnt, twice shy," you know. And I've gotten hard-boiled.

Men are no good, and no one of them will ever get my heart to throw around again. And these other girls who write to you had better make up their minds, as I have, not to let themselves in for a big hurt—not to believe the "line" that men tell, but don't live up to.

FAN.

Is Fan wise?

You know she isn't. Of course, she's had a bad blow, and of course, she is resentful, determined to shield herself from pain. But can you shield yourself by believing in nobody? Can you ever be happy, believing in nobody?

Of course you can't! And if you try it you'll pick nothing for yourself but disappointment. You'll never know sweet companionship or happy hope again. You'll never dare embark on another gallant adventure.

Only cowards get sour and fight life off because it hasn't come up to their "ideals." To be "disillusioned" isn't wisdom. It's weakness—weakness that kills.

NOT DEFENDING MAN

I'm not defending Fan's man, or any man like him, or any woman like him. But I am saying that this world is full of fine folks, and that life is worth whatever it costs. Usually, it costs plenty. But we should pay the cost, for the sake of the chance to live, and learn, and love.

If we'll take pain like that—as part of the process of growth—life will never cheat us, and we will never cheat life.

So don't be a piker, Fan. You've had your experience. Pay your price. Gather up your profits—and go on to bigger, better adventures!

'THE LADY IN THE MOON'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"See the Lady in the Moon!" you have heard people say. And they make a long arm, and put their cheek close to yours, and show you a cloudy shadow that vaguely looks like a vast lady's head with a great deal of hair. But—poor Luna—they show you the lady, and they show you the man, sometimes, but I never, never knew them to show the man and the lady at the same time! Poor Luna is always alone. Beautiful, pale, a dream woman if ever there was one, austere but rare, cold but wistful, she sits there in the sapphire sea of the night sky, alone; her man not there when SHE is.

When he is there, and your companion says, "See the Man in the Moon," then you see a broad, beaming, dim (as though half melted with his honeyed good humor) masculine face. And where, then, is Luna, for that must be her name—the lady who lives nunlike in the moon?

She sails above lovers. She must smile on them. She sees their soft caress. She paints the world silver for them—ghostly, fairy silver, that puts a soft enchantment on the senses, misting over all reality, putting a spell on the material world. All for lovers. She who is without one.

A surpassingly beautiful, radiant, star-decked, unearthly, lonely beauty. If she and Apollo, god of the morning, could but meet!

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in the early part of next month and I would like to know just how to word the announcements and invitations. I am going to be married in church.

My father and mother are divorced and each has been married again. MISS K.

You do not tell me the two important things that I must know in order to suggest exactly the form that you should use for your wedding invitations and announcements. These are: first, is your wedding to be a formal one; and, second, do you wish to have the invitation-sponsorship include your stepfather?

If you and your stepfather are on friendly terms, it is the very best form for you to have his name included in the sponsorship. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wells Wood
of your presence
at the marriage
Nanette Alexander Brown
to
Mr. Andrew Knowles
on Tuesday, the second of September
at four o'clock
United Church
San Francisco, California

Or, if you prefer the third line may read:

at the marriage of
Mrs. Wood's daughter

Or

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wells Wood have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter
to
Mr. Andrew Knowles
on Tuesday, the
second of September
Nineteen hundred and thirty-three
San Francisco, California

Again, if you prefer, the third line may read:

Mrs. Wood's daughter

Corsage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am taking a young lady to a formal dance at a country club, and I would like to know if it would be fitting and proper to present the young lady with a corsage? This is only a second date, but she treated me so nicely that I think she is deserving of a little token of friendship. I am 20 years of age and she is 17. H.

Yes, sir, by all means send this young lady a corsage to wear to this dance to which you are taking her. Not only is this friendly gesture "fitting and proper," but it would be more or less expected. Girls and women of all ages and sizes and types usually like and enjoy wearing a few gardenias, three, say, if the gardenias are fairly large, and four or five if they are the very small gardenias. Or a corsage of those small, delicately-shaded pink sweetheart roses make a beautiful corsage for a girl of seventeen. Or, for summer wear, sweetpeas of pink or some other delicate shade are appropriate and easy to wear.

Have any of these corsages made without ferns or greenery of any kind . . . florists glory in smothering flowers with greenery . . . and no ribbon, or at any rate not much ribbon. Give the flowers a chance to show their own beauty, their own personality. Send them late on the afternoon of the dance, and enclose your card, or write your name on a plain white card at the florist's.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

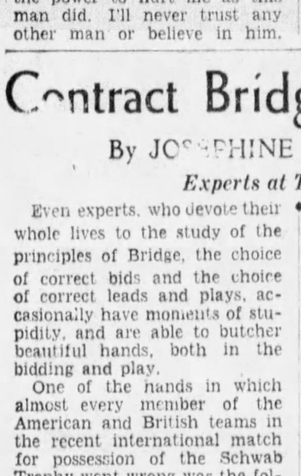
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Experts at Their Worst

Even experts, who devote their whole lives to the study of the principles of Bridge, the choice of correct bids and the choice of correct leads and plays, occasionally have moments of stupidity, and are able to butcher beautiful hands, both in the bidding and play.

One of the hands in which almost every member of the American and British teams in the recent international match for possession of the Schwab Trophy went wrong was the following:

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding in Room 1, where the English and American players were seated as indicated, was as follows:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♣	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Double	4 ◇	Pass
4 NT	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Mr. Culbertson had 13 possible leads, and of these he selected the worst—namely, the club 7. Had he led the King of clubs and followed with a low spade, Sir Guy Domville would have been very adequately punished for the sin of overbidding, of which both he and his partner were guilty. However, even with the lead of the club 7, the contract could have been defeated 100 points had not Mr. Lightner, for some reason of his own, played high and then a low spade to show possession of the Queen, which he did not have. Toward the end of the hand Mr. Culbertson naturally discarded the King of spades, whereupon Sir Guy made his Queen of spades and his contract of four notrump.

In Room 2, where I was sitting North and Mr. Gottlieb South, I doubled West's one-club bid and Mr. Gottlieb decided to pass. As a result, our opponents made one club doubled.

This was one of the boards that produced a real swing for the English players, but it was not enough to stem the tide which had already set in strongly toward an American victory.

FREE BRIDGE BOOKLET

Readers of this newspaper may have a free copy of "Bridge Rules and Etiquette," by Josephine Culbertson, through special arrangement. Address Mrs. Culbertson in care of this newspaper, INCLOSING A 3-CENT STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Both sides vulnerable.
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	?

You, North, hold:

♠ Q J 8 6 5 ♡ K 10 2 ◇ A J 9 3 ♣ 3

What do you bid?

Answer: Six spades. Not holding the remaining two Aces you cannot respond with five notrump. However, since you have more than a minimum three-spade bid and your partner is obviously looking for a Slam, you must take the action which he seems to desire. A five-spade bid would merely sign off and tell your partner that you hold no further values. An alternative response is five diamonds, which, since diamonds have not previously been shown, shows additional strength and probably will locate the Ace of diamonds for your partner.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Veritzen Changes Attitude Toward Lovers

"Lillian!"

Horror—if not real, the most perfectly simulated emotion I ever had heard—was in Philip Veritzen's voice as he answered Lillian's equally impassioned appeal: "Don't tell me you can't see what that would mean to Mary!"

"You—you can't think that I would deliberately plan that for any young girl, do you?" he asked impassionately.

Lillian looked at him steadily.

"I knew you wouldn't do it intentionally, my dear," she said simply.

He took down her hand from his shoulder and put it to his lips.

"Thank you, my dear," he said tensely, and as Lillian took his hand firmly between her own and looked at him with kindly belief irradiating her face, I felt ashamed of the grim little cynicism that whispered to me an ugly comment upon the great producer's protestation.

He was too good to be true, I told myself; too theatrical, altogether, to be wholly sincere. I saw that Lillian apparently believed him. Usually I rely on Lillian's judgment and insight, and take her conclusions in preference to my own; but in this instance I could not help the conviction that Lillian's judgment was being warped by the remembrance of Phil's magnificent, generous gesture when Marion, her idolized child, was in the hands of the kidnapers.

ADMITS GIVING CONSENT

He was speaking again now, and I set myself to listen, marveling at the sudden calmness of his words and manner. Either he was seething inside, masking his emotions beneath magnificent histrionism, or he had suddenly shifted his plans whether because of Lillian's appeal, or for reasons of his own.

"Then, as I understand it," he said slowly, "the situation is this. Noel and Mary have asked and received your permission to marry immediately."

He looked at me as if for confirmation, and I nodded my head.

"Where are Noel and Mary?" he asked abruptly.

"I think they are down in Mrs. Underwood's apartment," I said.

"Will it be possible to call them over here?"

"Yes; we can have them here in two minutes, Lillian, will you phone them, please."

Lillian walked to the telephone, while I fairly held my breath in wondering speculation as to what course Philip Veritzen meant to pursue. But I was not long left in doubt. He rose as Noel and his lovely fiancee entered the room, looking exactly like two frightened pupils sent to a principal's office for an infraction of school regulations, and going over to them, put one hand with apparent affection on Noel's shoulder and held the other out to Mary.

"You ridiculous children," he said fondly, "What is all this I hear about your trying to defy the ogre by jumping into matrimony?"

The dazed look on both young faces would have been ludicrous if it had not held such real pathos. Noel started to speak, but his father held up a commanding hand.

"Just a minute," he said. "Mrs. Graham has told me that you are so terrified at the thought of being separated from Mary for a year that you have asked permission to marry, and that she has given it to you. May I ask what your plans are after marriage? It really seems as if I might be entitled to know them."

The smile that he gave his son was a brilliant, kindly one, and I saw the boy gulp in sudden relief.

NO DEFINITE PLANS

"I fear we haven't any definite plans, sir," he said. "We wanted to wait until we had an opportunity to talk to you and find out if you really were set upon Mary's going over so soon. If she could wait a few months until that operetta was out of the way and my lecture engagements—those you got me—were filled, then I could go with her, and it would be perfectly marvellous for both of us."

He stopped and looked at his father with such unconscious pleading in his eyes that I wondered how any father could be impervious to it. There was no appeal in Mary's eyes, however. She looked with clear appraisal at the man who held her destiny and that of the man she loved in his hands.

"Suppose," said Philip Veritzen slowly, "that I say I cannot wait—that she must go now."

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Be versatile when it comes to beach clothes. One brilliant designer has a beach outfit consisting of blue linen shorts buttoning onto a flax-blue linen and white organdie shirtwaist top. A slit skirt buttons over the shorts, making a perfect dress.

See sights when you travel and wear the right clothes. Ideal for travel and sightseeing is a four-piece suit of tan burlap linen. The jacket is double-brested, the skirt is plain wrap-around, the coat is a loose-swinging swagger and the blouse is of brown handkerchief linen.

Get into a tube, for the tubular silhouette is most mentioned for autumn evening clothes. An advance model in rich purple-brown heavy crepe has the body sheathed in a tight tunic, the skirt with a frill gathered around the feet and a train in back. Shallow V neckline with clips.

Another point in the autumn mode is the insistence on points. Berets come to a point, other hats have a high point in back. Points will bring back the tricorne with its three points and so there is interest in a new tricorne of fine velvet with a trimming of grosgrain ribbon and a one-sided veil of net with appliques of velvet dots.

You can't do better than the printed frock for general summer wear. A delightful model is a flower print in three shades of blue and white on a navy ground. The material is crepe de Chine. There are big pleated crests at the shoulder and pleated ruffles at the heu. The belt is plain navy crepe; to match the plain navy capeline hat.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Significance of Albumin

Scarcely a week passes that I do not receive a letter requesting information about albuminuria. "Is the presence of albumin a serious disorder; does it mean Bright's disease; how can I overcome it, and what causes it?" These are the usual questions asked.

Dr. Copeland

Albumin is normally present in the urine. But the quantity is so slight that it is difficult to detect by the usual simple tests.

The presence is determined by a boiling process when a cloudy sediment appears. If acetic acid or vinegar dissolves the sediment, it is not albumin.

An excessive amount of albumin is frequently found after strenuous exercise. It is a common occurrence among athletes. It is also found in persons whose work demands continuous sitting or standing in one position. This type of albuminuria is called "orthostatic albuminuria." It quickly disappears upon rest, a change of occupation.

Albuminuria is encountered in persons who indulge in a high protein diet. For instance, people whose diet consists of an excessive amount of meat, fish and eggs, may show high amounts of albumin. When the diet is adjusted and made more varied the albumin will disappear. Albuminuria is also found in certain families, especially those made up of thin and energetic individuals.

I want to assure you that a faint trace of albumin does not indicate Bright's disease. But if it is found I do advise that you report to the doctor for examination at periodic intervals. Also report to your dentist and have all infected and diseased teeth removed. Avoid undue exposure to cold and protect against common colds and infections.

Certain types of albuminuria are dangerous. I refer especially to those cases where persistent and increasing amounts of albumin are found. This condition is due to a damaged and diseased kidney. If albumin persists and increases in amount despite diet, rest and hygienic care, neglect eventually leads to a serious condition.

Under proper diet and rest, recovery from mild cases of albuminuria may occur in less than a month. More severe cases require observation and care over a period of several months. In these cases complete rest is the most important part of the treatment.

Answers to Health Queries

J. W. Q.—What causes a red nose? 2. What do you advise for blackheads?

A.—This may be due to poor circulation, constipation or possibly nasal catarrh. 2. Diet and elimination are important in the correction of this disorder. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

Evelyn M. Q.—What can I do to clear my face of blemishes? I have been taking salts every morning and wonder if I could continue this treatment for a period of two months or so without harmful results?

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Just being pretty isn't enough these days; there must be charm of manner, smart attire, graceful carriage and an "air." Half the beauty of fashionable dress is in the way it is worn. Some women have the knack, others can't seem to catch it. The slender darling has a tremendous advantage, since fashion lives for her sake. Turn away from the inviting calories, hefty ones.

Health is the foundation upon which the temple of beauty is built. Nothing that comes from the cosmetic counter is a satisfactory substitute for vitality, which creates a sense of well-being. The healthy girl awakens in the morning, ready to put on her seven-league boots, face the day's activities with courage. Cheeks are pink, the world looks elegant. The lass who drags around on lagging feet, who doesn't get going until noon, whose face is worn and weary, can feel pretty sure that she's breaking some health law, isn't up to form. She may not be ill, simply under par. But she looks terrible.

If the heel rocks in the shoe at every step, calloused spots will appear to cause discomfort. Heavy skin forms as a protecting barrier against continued injury. After it thickens to excess, it becomes painful, has to be removed by soaking the foot in warm water to which soda has been added, rubbing with a pumice stone.

Taking out wrinkle insurance doesn't cost much; just a jar of tissue feeding cream, a sweet disposition, 10 minutes treatment every night. No skipping, but faithful attention to the complexion before tumbling in under the blankets. The skin surface must be clean, scrupulously clean. The soapy facial tubbing warms the flesh; oily cosmetics are more effective when applied to a glowing epidermis. Spread on the cream lightly. Begin a light tapping with finger ends spanking the under side of the chin. Work upward to the temples. Treat the nose with light rotary movements. While cream remains on, iron with an ice cube. Next morning plenty of cold water.

Household Hints

To dislodge grease from sink pipes, put soda and a little vinegar in the sink.

If three drops methylated spirits are put in the last rinsing water when washing silk stockings, no spots caused by rain will remain.

For an emergency refrigerator, stand a large earthenware jar in a bowl of cold water. Cover the jar with a piece of flannel, the ends of which are long enough to trail in the water. Butter, eggs, milk, and so on will keep quite cool in this, no matter how hot the weather.

A rice pudding is much improved by adding a little corn flour—a good dessertspoon to a quart of milk.

To clean milk bottles add a few grains of rice to the water, shake well, and the corroded milk will disappear from the bottom, ridge and sides.

Fish odors are apt to cling to saucepans in which fish has been cooked. This can be obviated by rubbing the inside of the saucepan while it is still warm with a small piece of butter wrapped in a little muslin. Do this after scouring in the usual way with hot water and soda.

RUTH DECLINES TO DISCUSS SPHERES

When Babe Ruth was here the other day for that exhibition game against the Pirates, this writer asked him if he cared to discuss the difference in the baseballs used in the National and American Leagues in a radio interview, and the Babe immediately shied off. You would have thought someone had tossed a bean ball at his head.

Rogers Hornsby

"Nix, nix. Anything but that."

It was apparent that the subject was a sore spot with the Babe. He continued:

"I got in very wrong taking up that matter once, and once is enough. How are we going to prove that the American League ball is livelier than the National League ball? The manufacturers say both are the same, and claim they can prove it."

Nevertheless, you can't tell the fans there isn't a difference. The tight pitching in the National League and the slugging in the American League prove it. There is much evidence all along the line. The American League sluggers can take a toehold and blast the ball out of the lot, while in the National League they have to jockey and work for their hits.

It is a question whether the fans prefer a lot of home run hitting to few hits and lots of base-stealing and the old Army game of pushing one run at a time around the bases. The American League seems well satisfied with its system, and the National League moguls are said to be considering a return to the lively ball, and there may be quite a powwow on the situation at the annual meetings next winter. Standardization of the ball may be the result, or the National League may try to reach a compromise whereby a little more of the rabbit will be put into its spheres to balance the offense and defense. As one National League clubowner put it:

"One home run will provoke more cheering than nine innings of shutout pitching. Personally, I prefer the latter, but, then, I'm not in this business for my health, and, if the fans want a lot of hitting, I'm in favor of giving it to them."

Rogers Hornsby, new manager of the St. Louis Browns, after his many years in the National League, says there is no doubt about a difference in the balls used in the two circuits.

KILPATRICK AN IDEALIST IN BOXING

The new deal for boxing proposed by Col. John Kilpatrick, the new president of Madison Square Garden, in New York, sounds like the dream of an idealist. He proposes to restore confidence in the sport by making matches the public wants with the full force of newspaper publicity centered upon his efforts. It is his idea that what is mainly wrong with boxing is the fact that the primary urge of almost every manager is to protect his boxer from matches with men who figure to have a chance of beating him. He would announce to the public that he wishes to make a certain match, then he would reveal all of the negotiations as he proceeds and place the responsibility if his efforts fail.

That smacks of using the mailed fist, and it would not work out. All a manager would have to do would be to put his price above the promoter's ability to pay, thus indirectly refusing the bout and placing the onus for its failure to go through upon the promoter.

Jimmy Johnston, the Garden matchmaker, who has been around for a long time, hit the nail on the head when he shook his head as he heard the good colonel expound his views and said:

"I'd like to hear him tell that to Primo Carnera and his brain trust."

SPEAKING OF BASEBALL RECORDS

A group of baseball men were discussing Lou Gehrig's feat of breaking Everett Scott's record for continuous games played when Mark Roth, secretary of the New York Yankees, broke in to tsh-tsh the party. Said Mark:

"I'm on my way now to St. Louis for my one hundred and first visit there with a baseball club. I broke in as a baseball writer in New York in 1903 and in 1915 I began to work for the Yankees. That's some sort of a record.

"Here's another one. Back in 1908 I was traveling with the Yankees when we left New York in first place and got only a tie and no wins out of 22 games and wound up in the cellar. They fired Clark Griffith and tried to find Willie Keeler to make him manager, but he heard about it and hid until after they had named Kid Elberfeld to the job. Willie the Wee always was a pretty cagy guy."

NAVY TO BE TOUGH FOE FOR PANTHERS

From Annapolis comes the word that this is going to be a Navy year in football, after many lean seasons for the Middies, and that is anything but good news for Coach Jock Sutherland and his Pitt Panthers, who take on the Sailors at the Stadium. Coach Rip Miller will have a veteran squad ready for service, and he will do no little pointing for the Pitt game.

This will be the seventh game between Pitt and Navy teams and the first since 1916. They first clashed in 1912, when Navy won, 13-0. The next year they played a scoreless tie, and, in 1914, Pitt won, 13-6. The first year of Pop Warner as coach here, 1915, saw Pitt bury the Middies under a 47-12 score and the series ended temporarily in 1916, when Pitt had the scare of its life, just eking out a 20-19 triumph.

The game this year will mark Navy's first appearance in Pittsburgh, and it will be a gala occasion, full of pageantry, such as the showing of Army here two seasons ago.

On this year's team Coach Miller will be able to muster a letterman or a second-year man who has beaten out a regular at every position.

At the ends, Navy will have the same pair that started against the Army, Miller and Murray, but it is a reserve of last season, Dornin, who was the big gun of the long spring training season and who is expected to start at one of the terminals. In addition, there are two unusually good yearlings on the squad in Holman and Shot.

TACKLES ARE TRANSPLANTED CENTERS

The tackles are likely to be two transplanted centers, Brooks and Cutter, the former with a year's experience at his 1933 position, and latter going into his first season, King, a member of the 1932 squad, who was handicapped by injuries last fall, also is being counted upon.

At the guards Miller can call upon Burns, a 1932 regular, and Johnston, a big, fast substitute, who lacks only experience. If Johnston doesn't come through there are three sophomores of equal ability in Springer, Zabriskie and Arnold.

There will be no worries about the center post, for the Midshipmen will have Harbold, an all-Eastern selection, to handle that job.

Two alternating quarterbacks of 1932, Slack and Becht, are likely to ride the bench, due to the appearance of a triple-threat sophomore, Pratt, one of the best looking backs on the squad.

Outstanding among the halfback candidates are Chung-Hoon, the famous bare-foot kicking Hawaiian, and Borries and Walkup. All three saw considerable service last fall, Rankin, a star from the Plebe team, rounds out an impressive quartet.

At fullback Coach Miller has taken two halfbacks, both lettermen, and developed them. He doesn't know yet whether to use Clark or Larsen at the post permanently, but Clark, the best punter on the squad for the past two seasons, has the edge.

All in all, the appearance of the Navy in the Stadium on October 14 should offer Jock Sutherland's Eastern title-seeking eleven quite a test.

RAIN HAMPERS TOURNEY AT FOREST HILLS

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Caught between rainstorms and Dorothy Round's disinclination to play on Sunday, the women's national tennis championships appeared to be fast approaching some kind of an impasse today.

It was certain there would be a few matches out at Forest Hills, but nobody was at all certain who would play who, or when, or whether they would play singles or doubles, if either.

The situation is scrambled. As originally planned, the tournament was to have ended today but it rained Monday, the first day, and it poured again yesterday after two of the four-quarter-final singles matches had been played and none of the doubles.

That leaves two girls, Helen Jacobs, of California, and Dorothy Round, of England, all ready to play a semi-final match today. Both won yesterday before the rain came, Miss Jacobs outlasting Josephine Cruickshank, of California, 11-9, 6-4, and Miss Round eliminating Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, 6-4, 9-7.

The two remaining quarter-final tilts, which were set up to today, pit Helen Wills Moody against Mary Heeley, of England, and Alice Marble, of San Farncisco, against Betty Nuthall, of England.

Were it not for the fact that Miss Round, daughter of a minister, declines to play tennis on Sunday, it might be possible to wrap the tournament up over the week-end and have it ready for delivery Monday. But the tournament committee respects Dorothy's wishes, so her match with Miss Jacobs probably will be played Monday.

HORSE FACES TITLE CHANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Another effort will be made to unravel the tangled three-year old turf championship today, when Samuel Riddle's War Glory, winner of three stakes, including the Dwyer, and Mrs. Sloane's Inlander surprise victor in the Arlington Classic, meet nine others of their age in the sixty-fourth running of the $25,000 Travers at Saratoga. The race will be at one and one-quarter miles.

STAR QUITS FOOTBALL

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—So as he may devote all of his time in preparing for medical school, George Venerosa, outstanding lineman for Temple's football squad in 1932, has forsaken the game and will not be a candidate this fall for Pop Warner's team.

MRS. CHRISTIE WINS

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 19.—Mrs. H. W. Christie won the Butler Country Club's women's title for the year, defeating Mrs.

Ripley's Believe It Or Not cartoon appears on Page 10 today.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 19.—Next to my personal beauty, folks seem to be more interested in the secret of our Washington team's success than anything else. Well, I guess it's because we are like the extraction class in dental college—we are all pulling together.

Nick Altrock

But another thing is the way Manager Joe Cronin smells the faintest wisp of weakness and yanks it out of the lineup. No fooling, I have seen him jerk a pitcher off the slab after pitching only two balls. Joe will even wigwag a guy to the shower baths if he don't like the way he hitches his pants.

But you got to marvel at the good-natured way he makes those switches. Joe never makes anybody mad when he yanks him out of the game. In fact, he could even make a guy feel happy inviting him to step down a coal hole. So these little things explain our success in a couple of nutshells I borrowed from Amos and Andy.

SHIELDS HERO AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Survivors of the finest field gathered together in Eastern tennis this season, Frank X. Shields, rangy conqueror of Champion Ellsworth Vines, and Wilmer Allison, Davis Cup veteran, lined up today in battle for the historic Newport Casino bowl.

Shields, who appeared unbeatable in the recent major grass fixtures, gained the most startling victory of his career yesterday when he crushed Vines in straight sets in the semi-final round, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Allison, almost a fixture in Casino finals, since he has qualified three times in the last four years and was Vines' runner-up here last year, had a terrific struggle downing Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, in a 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 9-11, 6-2 match.

George Lott, Davis Cup doubles star, and Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, were slated to clash with Sutter and Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, N. Y., in one semi-final match in the doubles today. Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, New York, were to resume play against Vines and Keith Gledhill, the national titlists who have won here for the past two years. They started the match between showers late yesterday and ran into a downpour early in the fourth set.

CANADIAN OPEN FIELD LED BY DARK HORSE

TORONTO, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Twenty-four-year-old Bobby Alston, to the surprise of even his own constituents, stood today a slim young bulwark against the might of a band of United States professionals who for 14 straight years have carried away the Canadian open golf championship.

Unnoticed when the 72-hole medal competition opened two days ago, the quiet young professional from the Rivermead Club in Ottawa headed a brilliant field by the margin of one stroke as 89 players, all within 20 strokes of his 142 stroke total for the first 36 holes, entered the final 36 holes today.

Alston had behind him two steady rounds of 71 each, a stroke under par, as he paced a field that included Gene Sarazen, recent winner P. G. A. title at Milwaukee; Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, who lost to Sarazen in the final; Ralph Guldahl, of St. Louis; Harry Cooper, of Chicago, defending champion; Leo Diegel, from Agua Caliente; C. Ross Somerville, U. S. amateur champion; George Von Elm, Horton Smith, Johnny Farrell, and Joe Kirkwood.

The pack was close on his heels. Kirkwood entered the final two rounds in second place with 71-72—143, while Cooper and Diegel were but another stroke back in a third place tie, Cooper with 70-74—144, Diegel with 72-72—144.

Dangerously close were Horton Smith with 73-72—145; Tom Kerrigan, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., with 146, and Farrell, whose 146 was made up of a 71 and a 75. Sarazen was in position for a diving finish with 76-71—147. Guldahl and Al Houghton had 147 totals.

Local Boxers Win In Eastern Bouts

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Jackie Wilson, 127, of Pittsburgh, took every round to defeat Ernie Ratner, 129½, Newark, in their 10-round main bout of a boxing card at the Ocean View A. A. arena last night.

In the scheduled eight-round semi-final, Referee George Waitt awarded the decision to Billy Wilson, 142, Pittsburgh, who went down under a low blow in the fourth round, struck by his opponent, Al Pieretti, 141, Bloomfield.

DUNDEE HERE FOR YAROSZ BATTLE

Vince Dundee arrived in Pittsburgh this morning from his training camp in New Jersey and went immediately to the Schenley Hotel, overlooking Forbes Field, where, on Monday night, he boxes Ted Yarosz in Pittsburgh's "Battle of the Century." His manager, Max Waxman, went to the Pittsburgher, where fight headquarters is located.

Dundee was to work out at the Pittsburgh Lyceum this afternoon. Yarosz winds up his hard training at his camp near Aliquippa, and will not come to Pittsburgh until shortly before weighing time Monday. The boxers will be weighed and examined at the fight headquarters.

PRELIMS ANNOUNCED

The complete revised preliminary card of five bouts was announced today. It follows:

Al Becker, Sheraden, vs. Johnny Riske, South Hills, middleweights, four rounds.
Eddie Zivic, Lawrenceville, vs. Harry Weekly, Alliance, O., lightweights, five rounds.
Joey Bazzone, McKeesport, vs. Al Lewis, Washington, Pa., welterweights, five rounds.
Phil Ross, Chicago, vs. Al Diamond, Newark, N. J., middleweights, five rounds.
Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth, vs. Al Salbando, Terre Haute, Ind., welterweights, five rounds (after main bout.)

Diamond is a sparring partner of Dundee and Weekly a sparmate of Yarosz. Salbano recently became a stablemate of Sammy Slaughter. Lewis is a former Penn State College boxing star.

Announcement was made today by Promoter John L. Hernon that the sale of general admission tickets will begin at Forbes Field at noon Monday, when the reservations window also will open to permit patrons to pick up tickets that have been ordered. Press reservations also will be handled at Forbes Field.

MANY SCRIBES AT RINGSIDE

Newspapermen will be here to report the fight from Erie, Beaver Falls, New Castle, Oil City, Franklin, Greensburg, Kittanning, New Kensington, Sharon, Youngstown, Butler, Charleroi, Tarentum, Washington, Newark, N. J.; Fairmont, Morgantown, McKeesport, Cumberland, East Liverpool, Steubenville, Wheeling, Canton and other cities. Ringside reservations also have been made for the International News Service, Associated Press and United Press.

Frankie Goosby, local Negro middleweight, boxes Jimmy Taylor in one of two 10-round bouts in Cleveland Tuesday night, Jimmy Vaughan and Frankie Wallace, Cleveland rivals, are in the other match.

Veteran Pitcher Hurls No-Hitter

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Fred Johnson, of the New Orleans Pelicans turned in the season's second no-hit no-run pitching effort in the Southern association yesterday when he blanked Birmingham, 6 to 0.

Only two Birmingham players reached the bases. Berres got on in the eighth when Catcher Autry missed the third strike and Kane walked.

PRIMO FAILS TO DRAW

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 19.—After a lapse of several months, professional boxing returned to Erie last night, only to receive a chilly reception from the fans, despite the appearance of Primo Carnera in a four-round exhibition.

The heavyweight champion boxed two rounds each with Jack Renault and Harold Mays as the highlight of a 32-round program, but only 1,591 persons paid their way into the Academy Stadium to see him.

In the 10-round main event of the regular card, Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, repeated his previous technical knockout over Frankie Bojarski, Erie southpaw, when he opened a deep cut over the Erie boy's left eye and Frankie was forced to retire at the end of the seventh round.

PIRATES OPEN SERIES WITH BRAVES

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—Ralph Birkofer, southpaw pitcher recalled by the Pittsburgh Pirates from the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the International League, will report to the Bucs here tomorrow, according to an announcement today by Samuel E. Watters, vice president and secretary of the club.

McKechnie

Watters has received word from Manager Dan Howley, of the Toronto Club, that Birkofer is in fine shape and will win for the Pirates. Manager Gibson indicated that he would use Birkofer in the important series with the Giants next week.

The Pirates were all set for a three-game series with the troublesome Braves this afternoon. A single game is scheduled for this afternoon and a doubleheader for tomorrow.

The invaders from Pittsburgh realized the Tribe has been playing as cleverly as any National League club in the past two weeks, and inasmuch as Manager Bill McKechnie has more than an ordinary incentive for finishing in the first division, his club will be tough as the eight entries go down the home stretch.

Skipper Bill will collect a generous bonus this year, provided his Braves windup in the first division. When Bill signed "them papers" about four years ago it was written into the agreement that he would get some extra pay in the event of a first-division finish of the Boston club in any of the four years' duration of his contract. McKechnie missed the goal by a hair last season, but his club is in much better shape to stage a late drive in the present campaign.

The Braves slipped a bit yesterday after they had twice beaten the Cubs, but on top of their defeat, while the Giants were winning, they were only eight games from the top.

MEINE PITCHES TODAY

Heinie Meine will twirl for the Pirates this afternoon in the first clash with the Braves. Heinie is likely to be opposed by Eddie Brandt, who generally is regarded as one of the topline lefthanders of the senior circuit.

The Pirates and Braves will cavort in one of those synthetic doubleheaders tomorrow. This means there will be an open date on Monday, the Monday game having been moved up to provide the bargain affair. The series will come to a close Tuesday, when a single game will be played.

Pirate President Bill Benswanger came to Boston with his club. He expects to stay through tomorrow, but will hurry back to Pittsburgh after the dual bill in order to be on hand for the Yarosz-Dundee boxing match scheduled for Monday night at the home of the Buccos.

ACID TESTS AT HAND FOR NEW YORK GIANTS

LEADERS MUST BATTLE CHIEF CONTENDERS

Associated Press.

The New York Giants, having painstakingly built up a five-game lead in the National League pennant struggle and having convinced a majority of the fans that they are "the" team of the circuit this season, are about to put their pretensions to the acid test.

In the next couple of weeks, beginning with today's game against the Chicago Cubs, the Giants have to take on all the other pennant contenders, Chicago, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Boston, in rapid succession. When that seige is over, they can be definitely catalogued as either a champion ball club or just a bunch of players who went a lot further than expected.

ADD TO LEAD

The Giants knocked off the lowly Cincinnati Reds for the third straight time, 4 to 1, adding a half game to their margin over Pittsburgh, which was idle. They rapped Red Lucas' pitching at right moments, finishing with Johnny Vergez's thirteenth homer.

Today they were to open against the third-place Cubs, who, far from being softened in their series with the Boston Braves, came back to win the last game, 4 to 3.

The American League continued to feature the Washington Senators and their firm hold on the lead as Joe Cronin's crew came back from the edge of defeat to beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-4, in 10 innings, and hold their seven-and-one-half-game lead over the New York Yankees. But the Cleveland Indians tossed in a little added interest by capturing third place from Philadelphia's Athletics by a single percentage point.

TRIBE PASSES A'S

The Indians turned back the Boston Red Sox, 2 to 1, on the strength of Mel Harder's five-hit pitching. The Detroit Tigers staged a four-run rally in the sixth, batting clear around at the expense of Roy Mahaffey and Dick Barrett, who discarded his pseudonym of Oliver, and shoved the Philadelphia Athletics down with a 7-to-6 triumph.

The Yankees had a big inning and a big scare as they defeated the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 3, to square their series. They cut loose with all kinds of hitting against Wally Hebert and Hank McDonald in the fourth, batted around and a little more and scored all eight runs. But as Babe Ruth came up for the second time, he was struck on the leg by one of McDonald's pitches and rendered temporarily hors de combat.

LOCAL NETTERS GAIN FINALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Aug. 19.—Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and Western Pennsylvania premier, battled Frank Broida, Harvard-Edgewood southpaw star, in attempt to retain possession of mens' singles laurels of Western Maryland on the Women's Civic Club gallery court here this afternoon. O'Loughlin overwhelmed Junior Kunkle, giant Westmont dark horse from Duke University, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0, yesterday as Broida defeated Billy O'Loughlin, 6-8, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

In the women's singles finale, Margaret Carspecken, seeking a third leg on the local flagon and permanent ownership thereof, encounters another Morgantown star, Frances Grimes, the latter having attained the trophy bracket yesterday by out-walloping Mrs. Dorette Miller, Washington driver, 7-5, 6-3.

Miss Carspecken and her Pittsburgh partner, Miriam Sullivan, defend their feminine doubles crown against Miss Grimes and Evelyn Claybrook of Cumberland.

LOCALS IN FINAL

Broida and Eddie Alcorn, carry Edgewood colors into the masculine dual terminal tussle with the crack Wheeling outfit, B. F. Arkle and Wright Hugus. Broida and Alcorn, victors here in 1932, yesterday downed the Westmonters, Kunkle and Dave Devlin, 12-10, 6-1, 6-3, while the Wheeling pair snatched a marathon from John O'Loughlin and Paul Sullivan, P. A. A. duo, 6-2, 3-6, 9-7, 6-4.

Miss Grimes and Broida are in the mixed doubles final, where they await [illegible] ome of a penultimate round fray in which Miss Carspecken and Sullivan meet Miss Claybrook and Brown.

BAUR WINGERED CLASH

ERIE, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Bryon Baur of Erie, six times holder of the singles title, and Lowell Wingered of New Castle have stroked their way with little difficulty into the finals of the twenty-eighth annual Northwestern Pennsylvania tennis tournament.

Baur disposed of two opponents, downing George Seewagen, of Bayside, L. I., in the quarter-final, 6-1, 6-2, and Jack Velzo, of Erie, in the semi-finals, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2. Wingered, a 1931 finalist, bettered Henley Sklarsky, of Niagara Falls, 7-5, 6-4, 6-3.

Spencer Howell, of Washington won the junio boys' singles title by defeating Paul Stevens, of Youngstown, O., 6-4, 6-4, and then, paired with William Hoyer, of Columbus, won the doubles title by eliminating Stevens and Morris, 6-4, 6-3.

SCHWARTZ ILL

GULFPORT, Miss., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Marchmont Schwartz, assistant football coach at Notre Dame and former All-America player, will undergo an examination at a hospital here today. His physician, Dr. W. C. Parker said the football star's ailment had not been fully determined.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: LAFCADIO HEARN—This distinguished author obtained his name from the island of Leucadia, where he was born of an Irish father and a Greek mother in 1850. He was raised by an aunt in Wales, was educated in England and worked as a newspaperman in Cincinnati and New Orleans. From here he went in the same capacity to Martinique in the West Indies and finally landed in Japan in 1890. He shortly became a Japanese subject and a Buddhist, married a Japanese woman, and assumed the name of Yakumo Koizumi. He was active as an English lecturer at the Imperial University of Tokio, where he died in 1904.

Gray to Join Senators Today

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Sam Gray, veteran right-hander, who was released, on waivers, to the Washington Senators by the St. Louis Browns Thursday, will join the American League pacesetters here today.

Gray was first ordered to report to the Senators in Chicago yesterday, but when the hurler informed the Washington management it would be useless to report immediately, as he had a sore arm, Clark Griffith said the deal was off.

Informed, however, that Gray's arm was only temporarily lame, Griffith reconsidered and told the ex-Brownie to await the Senators here.

Athletics' Slab Rookie Drops Non de Plume

DETROIT, Aug. 19.—(AP)—It caused no little puzzlement yesterday afternoon when the megaphone wielder at Navin Field announced that Barrett would succeed Mahaffey on the mound for the Philadelphia Athletics, and Dick Oliver strode forth.

Then it all came out.

Barrett wasn't doing so well with Elmira, a St. Louis Cardinal "farm," early this season and he bought his release, believing his baseball future might become permanently blighted.

Figuring that Dick Barrett might not get an unprejudiced chance in the major leagues, he adopted the name Oliver, and was playing semi-pro ball around Philadelphia under that name when Connie Mack, searching for a relief pitcher, signed him up.

Sportsmen Protest Hunting Season

At a special meeting of the 21 clubs associated with the Allegheny County Sportsmen's League, held at Homestead last night, it was voted to oppose the small game and bear season in the state this year and made suggestions as to how the season should be scheduled.

The suggestions were made after the study of a systematic survey of the situation.

The following schedule was proposed:

Rabbits—Entire month of November with the exception of election day and Sundays.

Birds and squirrels—A continuous period during the month of November, the time and length to be left to the discretion of the Game Commission.

Bear—The 1st of December to the 15th. Sundays excepted.

W. PA. AMATEUR HONORS WON BY YOUNG

By TOM BIRKS

Knox M. Young, Jr., of the Shannopin Country Club, returned to the scene of his former glories and at the conclusion of his visit yesterday afternoon at the Highland Country Club carried with him to the home of the Chieftains the trophy emblematic of the Western Pennsylvania amateur championship. He defeated R. B. Parker, of Highland, 5 and 3, in the final round.

This is Young's first year as a member at Shannopin. For many years he has been a featured member of Highland Country Club teams and always has played brilliant golf over the Wellington Heights layout.

Young refuted the idea that the medalist could not win the title. He won the medal with shots to spare and all of his match play rounds were close to par.

He won the medalist trophy, the winner's silver cup, and the team cup won by Shannopin in the qualifying round. Never before in the history of the 33 years of championship play has a champion been so consistent.

In the semi-final round, he defeated Fred Weppner, Field Club star, 3 and 2. Parker, in the other semi-final match, pulled the big surprise by eliminating the favorite, Fred Brand, Jr., of Shannopin, 4 and 3.

In the final round, Young got off to a good start winning the first three holes, two birdies being recorded. At the turn Parker had tried hard to come back but still was 3 down.

STARS COMPETE AT WEST VIEW

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

We have always felt that the keyed-up entry, the one bubbling over with excitement, was more likely to perform brilliant strokes than the person who took things as a matter of course. Also that the most difficult chap to defeat in match play usually was the nervous type, who at the start seemed unable to set his ball upon a tee, but who, after a few holes, lost all trace of nervousness and went along at an unbeatable clip. When Jock Hutchison won his British Open title he proved the excitable type was the one that did the most thrilling things on the golf course.

Francis Ouimet

St. Andrews, where Denny Shute recently became British Open titlist, has a stretch of holes, the sixth through the eleventh, where the golfer must do his stroke-saving. Eliminating the eleventh, which is a par 3 affair, those six holes have a par of 4, with the exception of the eighth, and par on that is 3. In one round, Hutchison had five consecutive 3s over this stretch. In another, his card for the six holes read 4, 4, 1, 2, 4. These two super-brilliant dashes were quite necessary because in the end he was tied with Roger Wethered.

Hutchison was a highly-geared player and at times did unbelievable stunts on the links. Another is Leo Diegel. This fellow on occasions can hit a patch of blazing golf that seems impossible for a human being to accomplish. High-strung and nervous, Diegel is a wonder, and it seems that the real low scorers frequently develop from this type, although, after all, it comes down to a matter of competitive ability, and you have or else you lack it. In the recent qualification test for the National Amateur event in the New England section, it was my pleasure and good fortune to be paired with Charles C. Clare, a fine young golfer from New Haven. For the first 18 holes, Clare was 75, a figure which really did not represent the true caliber of his play. I was one stroke more.

INDIFFERENT PLAY RUINOUS

We were playing over the Brae Burn Country Club course, a fine testing one. Then things began to happen. From a feeling of security which we both enjoyed we commenced our afternoon round. Little slips happened here and there with an occasional major misplay and the first thing we knew we had our backs against the wall. After five holes of spotty play, during which time we took the situation calmly, we realized our predicament and settled down to play decently. It was too late. I have had sufficient experience to know the danger of taking any round of golf lightly, but to save my life I could not get keyed up to the proper pitch, and Clare told me he felt the same way.

It is not a simple thing to do, that of keying one's self up if he has not entered in that frame of mind to begin with. It was not a case of over-confidence, but, rather, one of indifference, I should say. Had Clare and I been nervous, I feel certain we would have qualified without any difficulty because we would have been alert to guard against the very errors that developed. It taught me a lesson, but whether there is any cure for it I cannot say until I have given it another try.

PLAY EVERY STROKE

The lesson to be gained from such an attitude or temperament is this: Take nothing for granted, and play every stroke for all there is in it. Sometimes this is a hard thing to do. If a person enters a medal or match round of golf he should do his best to divorce himself from every outside influence that may enter his head and concentrate upon each shot as it develops. I often have felt that one of the reasons Walter Hagen has shown mediocre golf recently has been due to that same factor, failure to key himself up.

When you see Hagen open a championship with an 68 it is hard to understand why it is he will rise to a total of 82, as he did in the British Open. Certainly it is not because his skill has departed, because a great player will not lose his game overnight. I am forced to believe the real reason is one of temperament, that is to say, lack of nervousness, if you will, but surely lack of the old spark that made it possible for him to go for low scores. If the low rounds occur Hagen is satisfied, and, if not, for the moment, at least, he seems unwilling to drive himself as most of the nervous people do.

OHIOANS FACE CRAWFORDS

The Pittsburgh Crawfords clash with the Cleveland Giants in a double header at Greenlee Field this evening, with the first game being called at 5 o'clock.

The Clevelanders are composed of practically all of the former Akron Grays, and are expected to give the locals a battle. This game will be the last Saturday game here until after September 10, when the all-star game is scheduled in Chicago. Monday night, Ladies' Night will be celebrated at Greenlee Field with a night game.

Dormont threw the second half City League race into a deadlock last evening, knocking off the ambitious Books, defending champions, 2 to 0, as Carroll limited the Books to four hits in a seven inning game. The defeat put the Books back into a tie with Whitaker for the circuit lead.

The Crawfords completed their Eastern invasion last evening, defeating the New York Black Yankees, 5 to 1 before a capacity crowd at Phillipsburg.

Chippy De Stout, of East Liberty, star infielder of the Homewood club of the City League, will join the New York Giants in New York today. He was signed by Manager Bill Terry after working out with the Giants during their recent series at Forbes Field.

McKechnie, Bush Chased by Umps

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Two more major league baseball managers have been banished from the game for disputing decisions too vigorously with the umpires.

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Braves, was put out of the Cubs-Braves game at Boston by Umpire Powell for protesting too long and loud on a play in the first inning, in which two Chicago runs crossed the plate.

At the polo grounds in the Reds-Giants contest, Donie Bush claimed Fred Fitzsimmons made a balk while Chick Hafey was at bat in the third inning. Umpire Magerkurth failed to agree and when Bush refused to stop the argument, the Cincinnati manager was ejected from the game.

STEEL UPTURN IN OCTOBER LIKELY

By B. E. V. LUTY

Although buying of steel is restricted by some special and unexpected influences it is held in that trade that production is decreasing at a slower pace than that by which it advanced. If there were a correspondingly rapid decrease production of ingots would be down to a rate of 42 per cent at the middle of October, that being the rate which prevailed at the beginning of June. An upturn in demand is expected before that date.

The highest rate was 59 per cent, in the latter part of July. Since then rates for successive weeks have been approximately 58, 56 and 54 per cent, the last named before for the week now ending. It is recalled that when the 42 per cent rate was first reached the steel industry was regarded as doing quite well indeed, while even the 30 per cent rate reached late in April was regarded as rather a fair one.

At the middle of June an eventual decrease in steel production was foreshadowed as a possibility while at the beginning of July this was definitely forecast, as a result of the heavy buying in anticipation of price advances because when price advances should be in full effect there would be a corresponding decrease. For about two months steel production has been well in excess of actual ultimate consumption, stocks of steel and manufactured wares accumulating.

NEW BUSINESS SLOWER

New business, supplementing the backlog business now being worked off by the mills, has been coming in at even a slower rate than was to be expected, on account of two recent developments making buyers particularly conservative about commitments. One was the unexpected and apparently unnecessary coal strikes in the Connellsville region and elsewhere, creating fears that there might be other labor disturbances, while the other was the difficulties encountered in reaching an accord on the iron and steel industry's code of fair competition and doubt as to the final form of the code.

Buyers have been doubtful whether present steel prices would be fully maintained while sellers feared that the code might prescribe conditions making for even higher costs than anticipated by prices now quoted, and hence they became somewhat reluctant to sell. Then there is the definite issue of various large buyers being asked to pay full open prices when hitherto they have enjoyed concessions.

Occasional predictions that steel activity will increase early in September are made rather loosely. Investigation of conditions and prospects in the respective finished steel products indicate rather that an upturn should begin in late September or early October.

SUMMER LULL LATE

With the conservative feeling now prevalent among buyers of steel and manufactured wares made from steel, there is a definite prospect that there will be no little liquidation, thus making an influence to slow down mill operations in addition to that of extra or so-called "speculative" buying having ceased recently. The feeling is thought to be akin to the influences which have tended to slow down electric power production and freight car loadings recently, after their sharp increases.

Actual ultimate consumption of steel and steel products has decreased little if at all, but a belated summer lull is one feature in the picture. Production of automobiles had a slight decrease three weeks ago and while there appears to have been no further decrease a relatively sharp one is now expected. Automobile and parts makers have lately been making no purchases for extended delivery.

This year's steel production will show a large increase over that of last year. Fully a week ago this year's total since January 1 equaled that in the whole of last year.

Connellsville coke has been dull at advanced asking prices resulting from various wage advances beginning late in June and numbering two or three at the respective plants.

The heavy melting steel scrap market is quoted at $13.25 to $13.75, representing 25-cent decline.

Foster Wheeler's Deficit Reduced

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The Foster Wheeler Corporation report for six months ended June 30, shows net loss of $436,588, after charges, taxes and depreciation, comparing with net loss of $646,028 in the first half of 1932.

Others received by the corporation in the first six months of this year were 50 per cent in excess of the like period last year. For the past three months they have averaged more than double the same period last year.

By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

Editor, The Econostat

The recent rise in activity at the Stock Exchange, accompanied by a corresponding rise in all other exchanges, commodity and otherwise, throughout the country, has raised certain questions. The first of these is the capacity of bitter experience to check the speculative excess of the public. It had been felt by many economic moralists during the past three years that the severe trouncing which the stock market had provided would prove a permanent lesson and as such would prevent future similar mistakes. The second question involves the possibility that the Government might find it necessary to step in and check a runaway speculative movement.

Regarding the first point, namely, the return of the old speculative flame, it is almost trite to say that the inclination to take a chance when it holds the prospect of profit is so deeply engrained that one bitter experience or a series of them is not likely to correct it.

Furthermore, from the point of view of economic welfare it is necessary that people with money should be willing to assume risks even though these risks deal only with purchases and sales of securities. It does not seem likely that Uncle Sam, who has conjured up the present improvement in business and security values, will step on the brakes, at least for some time to come.

The chart is interesting in that it shows the increase in security holdings of three great American corporations, the Pennsylvania Railroad, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the United States Steel Corporation. The number of stockholders has increased steadily even during the three years of the depression.

The other line, representing security activity, shows that the market is well on the way to the volume which characterized the great boom era of 1928-1929. If it proves anything it proves that the speculative spirit during the mournful interregnum of the last three years has not been chastened, but is merely dormant and awaiting the sunshine of opportunity to spring again into life.

Administration Planning New Bank Program

By JOHN A. KENNEDY,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17. — A complete reform of the Glass-Steagall banking bill has been decided upon by the Roosevelt administration.

Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, one-time Secretary of the Treasury, and Professor A. A. Berle, Jr., are developing the program which is expected to be presented to Congress in January.

Under present plans their program is to develop a law which will divide the field of banking into four classes, each to be served by a separate type of institution.

First they plan to encourage the founding of strictly savings banks which would handle savings accounts and do no other type of banking. Such savings banks would invest their money in long term government bonds and other securities, would pay a reasonably high rate of interest and limit withdrawals to a percentage of the amount carried on deposit.

The second type of bank would be the commercial banks which would handle checking accounts of individuals and corporations and make strictly commercial loans, as are now made by banks to finance ordinary short-term phases of corporate, individual and partnership transactions.

The third type would be banks to handle trust activities, including estates, and other varied types of normal trust company functions, these would not be banks of deposit.

The fourth type would be the so-called banque d'affaires, as such concerns are known in Europe, whose function would be along the lines of investment houses of the type of J. P. Morgan and company, except that they would not accept deposits.

The investment bank would underwrite securities, be fiscal agents for foreign governments and do other types of business ordinarily conducted by investment houses.

Such a system, in the opinion of those behind the proposed new law, would eliminate many evils now prevalent in the American banking system.

Sears, Roebuck Overcomes Loss

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Sears, Roebuck and Company and subsidiaries report for 24 weeks ended July 15, last, consolidated profit of $1,619,811 before federal taxes, but after depreciation, etc. This compares with loss of $2,120,019 in the corresponding 1932 period.

The company this year wrote off and charged to current expenses $350,000 for entire cost of the Sears' Building at the Century of Progress and $150,000 out of a total of $233,000 for company deposits in banks closed during the moratorium.

WHEAT LEAPS IN BIG BUYING

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Grain value made a rapid early advance today after an irregular start.

Likelihood of widening or removal of limits on price fluctuations caused some selling at the outset, but then acted as a powerful stimulus to buyers. Opening at 1⅜ decline to ⅛ advance, wheat afterward bounded skyward, with purchasing on a big scale.

An extreme jump of almost 4 cents a bushel from early bottom figures took place in wheat before any recession was witnessed. Similar action was seen in corn and other grains. Corn started unchanged to 1 cent down, and later climbed nearly 5 cents above the initial low levels.

DEFYING LAWS OF ECONOMICS PERILOUS

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—One of the most serious and discouraging conditions today is the tendency to belittle the science of economics and deny the existence of economic laws.

Some have said that because economists differ in their definitions of "wealth," "capital," "rent," etc., they are at sea and know nothing.

It is unfortunate that some economists differ from others in the definitions of terms which they think it best to adopt. This is confusing to the public. But it need make no difference in the conclusions reached, if the definitions are clear and are strictly followed.

There is also much disagreement among physicists, biologists, and mathematicians. But we do not throw those sciences out of the window on that account. Indeed, the laws of gravity and of refraction of light work and are useful, although scientists quarrel about the nature of matter and light.

EXPERIMENTS FADE

This attitude toward economics makes it possible for persons who have no definitions at all to set up as economists, and to propose erroneous or even impossible things. They confuse cause and effect, ignore experience, and plunge from one error to another.

Where is "technocracy" now? Where is the "new era" of 1929?

Why did the depression get worse and worse despite high wages and huge supplies of credit by the reserve board?

What has become of "free silver," the single tax, and the host of communistic experiments of the past?

It is said that economics is full of contradictions and inconsistencies. This is true of the thought of some economists just as it is of all sorts of scientists. But is that any reason for rejecting economics or science?

SHOULDN'T TURN ASIDE

There is a large and growing body of economic science which is not full of contradictions. Where inconsistencies exist, it is necessary only to weed them out. That is the way economics has grown.

Certainly there is no reason in turning to the minority of queer "economists" whose thought is not only self-contradictory but is also in conflict with the well established body of economic principles established during the past one hundred years.

Some seek to belittle economics as being out of date, and refer to its "time-crusted theories." How about the time-crusted theories of astronomy and chemistry? They are even older. And older than economics are theories of socialism, government control of industry, and paper money.

Anyhow, are principles which have met the test of time bad, and only the new hypotheses (if there are any) good?

POINTS TO BEST MEANS

Economics is not hopeless or despairing or dismal. It shows not only why we have poverty and depression, but also how we can avoid these evils. It seems "dismal" only to those who insist on trying to do impossible things, just as the doctor may seem dismal to a man whom he tells what he can't eat.

Those who rebel against economic laws talk much of the power of "human agencies," and seem to think that man can do anything he wants to do.

But the point is that economics shows what intelligent men want to do. It shows us which human agencies are best. We do not want to do things which cost more than the benefits which they give us, and it is economics which helps us to avoid mistakes of this sort.

We have never been able to "peg" prices successfully, and economics tells us why we should not waste time and energy in trying.

No one can deal successfully with economic problems unless he acts according to economic laws. To ignore these laws or to try to run against them shows an ignorance of or disbelief in science. It is bound to fail of sustained success.

Stock Exchanges On Special Holiday

Stock exchanges throughout the country were closed today in accordance with the summer schedule put into effect a few weeks ago. The Chicago Board of Trade (Grain Pit) and the New York Cotton Exchange operated as usual.

COTTON SINKS UNDER SALES

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Cotton futures opened easy, 9 to 19 lower under liquidation and southern and continental selling. October, 9.23; December, 9.40; January, 9.46; March, 9.59; May, 9.73; July, 9.89.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Bank clearings again show quite a decided change for the better. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., of $4,477,628,000 was 8.9 per cent higher than the amount a year ago. At New York City, clearings were $3,160,751,000, an increase of 13.5 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,316,877,000 was 0.5 per cent lower.

The improvement was again largely at New York City, although stock and bond sales there were very much less this year than they were a year ago. Other key centers reporting heavier clearings were Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Richmond, Dallas and Louisville. An important factor was the increase in bank clearings this week of $588,336,000 over those for the first week of August, whereas a year ago the amount was only $46,176,000 higher.

Figures at leading centers showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings each month for the year to date:

COMMODITIES LOSE GROUND

AUBURNDALE, Mass., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Commodity prices during the past week registered the first pronounced decline since last February and represents the first break of importance in the reconstruction scheme, says the McGill Community Service. Out of 14 individual groups nine declined, four remain unchanged, and only one, namely paper and pulp — advanced. The level of all commodities, although resting under the peak recorded earlier in the month, still stands 30 per cent over the low of practically six months ago.

The most important changes in the McGill weekly price index (1926 equalling 100) were as follows:

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
All commodities	57.3	58.5	50.7
Industrial	64.5	64.8	54.6
Agricultural	54.9	58.3	43.9
Livestock	43.2	44.1	47.6
Paper and pulp	77.0	75.9	72.9
Fine textiles	64.0	64.5	40.5

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 9,647

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Loading of revenue freight in the week ended August 12 totaled 622,759 cars, an increase of 9,647 cars over the preceding week and of 110,794 cars over the corresponding week in 1932, according to the American Railway Association.

PIT MAY WIDEN GRAIN LIMIT

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Proposals to loosen the price swing restrictions on grain market operations were receiving consideration from two sources today—one of them federal authorities.

President Peter B. Carey of the Chicago Board of Trade said it would probably take action before Monday to modify or eliminate the limitations on daily fluctuations to 5 cents a bushel either way for wheat, rye and barley, 4 cents for corn and 3 cents for oats.

Carey said officials of the board believed that no limit is necessary but that a ten cent limit would be more comparable to the ange now placed on cotton trading.

He explained that no action would be taken, however, without the approval of the federal department of agriculture. A representative of the board is now in Washington, presumably, to obtain its acquiescence.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace declined comment on the question of removing the fluctuation limits. One of his aides, however, indicated he was keeping close watch on the situation. Carey said:

"The limits don't seem to have accomplished their purpose. They have made it impossible to have a free market for traders to hedge cash grain deals without fear of sending the market to the daily price limit and thereby checking business."

Advertising Powerful Aid to Insurance

Life insurance companies, faced by changed conditions brought on by the last few years, must use the powerful supplementary aid of national advertising in their selling processes, William A. Law, president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, says in the current issue of Printers' Ink. The article says:

"Of course, we do not believe that the time will ever come when the billions of dollars of life insurance that are written each year by agents in face-to-face solicitation will be written solely as a result of advertising without the prompting of agents. But we are convinced that advertising can tell the public about the stability of life insurance, can increase the confidence of the public in companies that have withstood the storms of business depressions, the waves of epidemics and periods of war, and that to a great extent national advertising can facilitate the work of life insurance salesmen.

"The financial perturbations of the last three and a half years, intensified by the recent and still present economic and financial situation, which resulted in the life insurance moratoria, have left a considerable amount of confusion in the minds of policyholders of all companies. We believe that advertising offers the strong company an effective means for reassuring its policyholders as well as for impressing others with its stability."

Mr. Law said the life insurance dollar is in competition with the luxury and super-comfort dollar, particularly with the dollar spent for goods and services sold on the installment plan. To meet this competition, he said, life insurance companies should use one of its chief sales instruments—advertising.

POPEYE TO CUT BIG CAKE ON BIRTHDAY

When the boys and girls of Pittsburgh see the birthday cake that Popeye is going to cut and give away at his birthday party in Kennywood Park next Friday their eyes are going to open in amazement. It's really a whopper and will be so delicious that every youngster's mouth will water for more.

In the first place it is going to be the biggest cake ever baked in Pittsburgh, and Rhea's is going to make it. Well, Rhea's just volunteered yesterday to do the big job, but they don't know just how they are going to do it. From the way things look at this time, it is possible that the cake will have to be made in sections. These sections will be joined together and the entire cake frosted and decorated with Popeye pictures. Some cake, isn't it?

In the meantime all the boys and girls in and around Pittsburgh are excited about Popeye's birthday party, particularly the contest for the best juvenile Popeyes and Olive Oyls. Attractive prizes will be given for the best impersonations of these two favorites of the Sun-Telegraph comic pages. Popeye—in person—will be one of the judges.

The strips of eight free tickets for the rides and attractions will be ready for distribution Monday afternoon. In today's Sun-Telegraph there is a list of stations where Popeye coupons can be exchanged for these tickets. Fifteen-cent street car passes, good for Popeye Day, also will be on sale at these stations. The final coupon in the Popeye series will appear in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph. There is no coupon printed today.

CRUISE TEST ENDS MONDAY

Readers of the Sun-Telegraph participating in the "Contest Cruises," in which two all expenses paid trips to Florida and two trips to Boston by ocean are to be given away as prizes, are advised to begin constructing their contest letters immediately—telling why they need a vacation this summer.

This is important on account of the short time allowed to turn in entries. The limit on this time was made early so that the cruises can be awarded before the vacation season is over. These cruises are a awarded by the Sun-Telegraph, co-operating with the Merchants and Miners Line, sailing out of Baltimore.

The contest will close with the publication of the two final questions—No. 19 and No. 20—Monday and all answers must be submitted before Friday, at midnight, August 25th. They are to be addressed to the Contest Cruise Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Independent Women Indorse Lencher

A group organized as the Independent Women Voters of the Regent Square section of the Fourteenth Ward last night indorsed the candidacy of Judge Benjamin Lencher for County Court.

Meeting at the home of Mrs. M. Keil, 1027 Lancaster avenue, the organization commended Judge Lencher's work of the past four months in administering the juvenile division work of the County Court.

A testimonial banquet will be given Judge Lencher Sunday night by the Congregation Beth Jacob in Duquesne. Speakers will include Judge Lencher, Judge Ralph H. Smith, Mayor James S. Crawford and R. B. Davies, Jr., president of the Duquesne Trust Company.

HENRY ASSAILS BENEDUM

Money is being "distributed with a lavish hand" in the Hill district by M. L. Benedum's Negro butler, John M. Henry, Democratic candidate for Mayor, charged last night at a meeting in the home of David Goldner, 5737 Holden street.

Henry exhibited a check for $6, signed by Joseph H. Gould, who he said was Benedum's butler and also treasurer of the "Colored Democratic Committee" at 2131 Center avenue. Across the face of the check was written "special assessment work," Henry said. He added:

"It is a tragic spectacle to see this man of many millions exploiting the forgotten man's poverty to gain his political ends and thereby thwart the hopes of the independent, uncontrolled voter.

"The people of this city are certainly deserving of a better fate than to be reduced to a choice between Mellon-Gulf domination as represented by Mr. Herron and Benedum-Trees domination as represented by Mr. McNair."

Man After Row Ends Life With Dynamite

WILKES-BARRE, Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Binding two sticks of dynamite to his chest, Stephen Sokolowski, 42, of Alden Station, ended his life last night by touching off the charge with an electric wire attached to a fuse box. He had been quarreling with a relative.

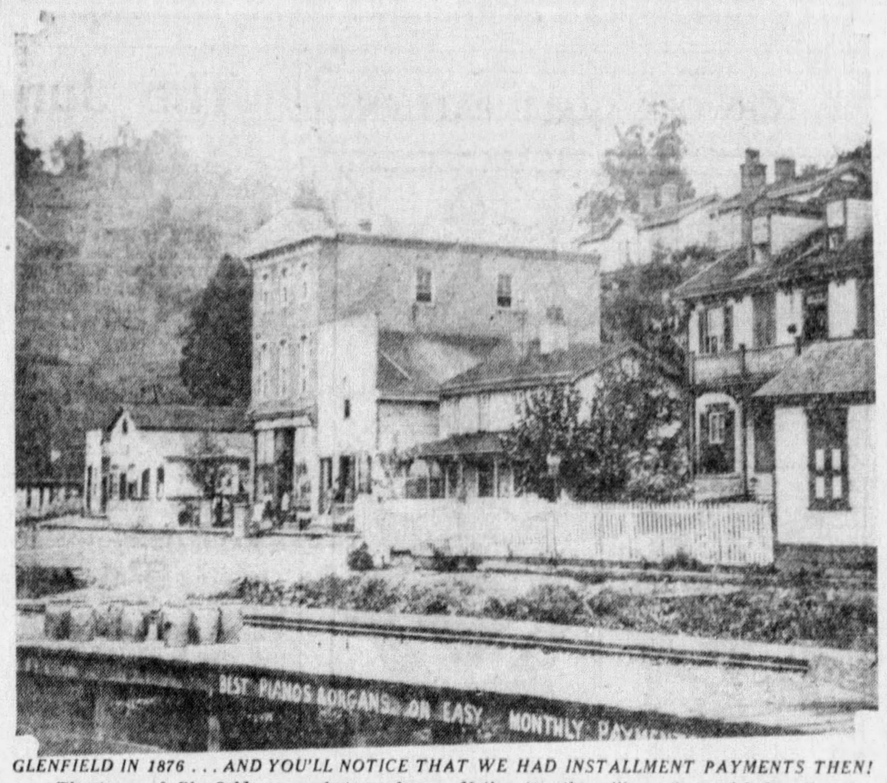
REMEMBER WHEN This Was Glenfield, Pa.?



GLENFIELD IN 1876 . . . AND YOU'LL NOTICE THAT WE HAD INSTALLMENT PAYMENTS THEN!

The town of Glenfield—as a photographer 57 years ago saw it across the tracks of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway. Notice, too, the milk crocks used before the advent of the cans of today. This picture was lent for publication by C. R. Duty, Ingomar.

Have You Any 'Remember When' Pictures?

"Remember When" pictures—the older the better—may be submitted by mail to the REMEMBER WHEN EDITOR, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., with full explanations for consideration as suitable for publication on this page. Pictures of groups of more than six people are unacceptable. WARNING: Write name and complete address on the back of each picture to assure safe return.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Leni was still for so long that Cavanaugh began to wonder if she were asleep.

"Are you awake?"

"Yes, darling."

"Happy?"

Her face moved closer to his own; her breath on his cheek was like the fragrance of a flower.

"So happy I can't express it," she murmured. "Something is happening to us, Lucky—something that I can hardly believe is true. Do you think it possible—is there such a thing as being born again? On this earth?"

"Certainly I believe it," Lucky assured her tenderly. "It's happened to me already."

At that instant the telephone rang with a wild clamor.

"And there's Gabriel blowing his horn," he added with a grin. "Do you want to answer it?"

Leni reached out a smooth, lazy arm and picked up the phone. A man's voice, soiled and rusty reached her small ear.

"Listen, lady—and get what I'm saying straight. I want to talk to Lucky Cavanaugh bad. If you know where he is tell him to get in touch with me——"

"Who is this, please?"

"Just tell him Slug wants to speak to him!"

"Slug?"

"That's right."

Cavanaugh reached across and took the voice out of her hand.

Cavanaugh put his hand over the transmitter and spoke to Leni.

"Ask him to repeat the name and hand it back to me so I can hear his voice."

"Who is this again, please?" inquired Leni softly.

The instrument changed hands and Cavanaugh, listening closely, heard the unmistakable voice of Slug coming from its obscure source.

IMPORTANT CONVERSATION

"Just tell Mr. Cavanaugh to get in touch with Slug as soon as possible. Slug—got that?"

"Hello there, Slug!" said Cavanaugh heartily, "What's the word?"

Leni completely relaxed, watched Cavanaugh, whose face became an iron mask as he listened to what Slug was saying. He rested on one elbow and the visible tension in his whole straight figure showed that he was hearing something that was deeply important.

The idyllic pleasure in which Leni had been dreaming began to vanish. For a little while they had circled themselves around with the wall of forgetfulness against the outside world...a world so fragile that it had been shattered by the ringing of a telephone. It was, so it seemed, impossible to hide away from life...

There was no clue toward what Cavanaugh was hearing in his half of the conversation.

"Yes . . . I see . . . Yes . . . I understand . . . Okay . . ."

He put up the instrument and swung himself to a sitting posture on the edge of the bed.

"What is it?" she asked, reaching up and running her fingers through his thick hair which was always faintly scented with cigarets and shampoo.

"Nothing important," he said non-committally.

But Leni knew this was not true. "Tell me!"

"It's nothing, really. Slug wants to see me, and talk over something."

"You are leaving, then?"

Cavanaugh, his thoughts elsewhere, gave Leni a small wry smile. He was thinking entirely of what Slug had said.

CAVANAUGH IN HURRY

"Yes—I'll have to get going," he answered. He did not sound regretful, but eager. "We're going to be all right—but a lot has to be done first."

Leni got up. She handed him a comb and brush for his hair. He had long been without sleep and she fancied his eyes looked tired. She wanted to do many tender things for him, but he was in a hurry to be gone.

She stood in front of him, aching at the thought of letting him go. Her hands were outstretched and he took hold of them, but the mood of romance had evaporated. There was a new look in his eyes—hard, nervous, tense. He drew her to him and kissed her.

When shall I see you again, thought Leni and her eyes became so misted that he was but a wavering outline through her tears.

"You'll hear from me soon," he said "I'd better not phone. Mulrooney may tap the wire. This house is going to be watched. But I'll find a way.

So intent was he upon what was in his mind that he did not even notice her eyes were wet. It was more difficult than she had expected to let him go. Her arms, with the age-old movement of womankind, began to cling to him.

"Can't we both go away off together?" Leni pleaded. "We can get a ship to any part of the world."

"Got to settle up here first," answered Cavanaugh quickly.

"Then settle up as soon as possible," said Leni with her moist lips. "Make it soon—soon! I've brought you so much bad luck—so much trouble—but I'll make it all up to you. I swear I will, darling. We'll leave Hollywood—we'll go far away and live and live and live! Protect yourself, darling—don't let anything more happen! Surely, there must be a way to finish this terrible business up in a peaceable manner."

Cavanaugh kissed her again.

"Don't worry, sweetheart. We'll soon be free."

Leni knew he was going out on a mission of inevitable danger. The least she could do was to let him go with a smile.

"Make it sooner than soon!" she said as she shut the door behind him.

As Cavanaugh went down the stairs he was conscious of a suppleness of his own body. He was short of sleep, under a terrific strain—yet he had touched a reserve supply of nervous force. The second wind. In his breast, was a spiraling sensation of excitement, of tingling audacity.

The fact that Leni was behind him — waiting — constituted an electric force running through all his movements.

At the door he hesitated. The place might be watched. That was a risk that had to be met.

This feeling, however, was groundless. Despite all efficient intentions, the police are sometimes dilatory.

Cavanaugh glanced at his watch. Five minutes had elapsed since he had ceased talking to Slug. Sufficient time for the man to be here. He opened the door and boldly walked down to the curb.

STRANGE COSTUMES

In Hollywood, everyone is accustomed to the strangest costumes. Bedouins and cowboys and Foreign Legionaires come and go, attracting no attention, except from the visitors. Evening clothes are quite commonplace along the boulevard at noon. Wild automobile chases, preceded by police escorts and sirens, careen through the streets, cameras on trucks in close pursuit.

All in all, it is perhaps the most colorful and surprising city on earth. These startling characters in costumes are movie extras. Hundreds of them are employed daily. As a rule they congregate in the vicinity of the studios where they are working, but often they roam the entire city in childish pleasure with their commonplace identity concealed beneath their glamorous costumes.

It was for this reason that Slug, sitting in a battered roadster and garbed in a vivid plaid shirt with a red handkerchief around his neck and a flapping felt hat on his head, attracted no attention whatever. This costume was complicated by a set of bushy black whiskers glued to Slug's somewhat venal countenance. He wore tight gray trousers, black boots and a revolver and cartridge belt. Also, he smoked a pipe.

Even the children in the street knew what he was and did not bother to look.

He was a miner of '49—one of the four or five hundred similar extras working in one of those perennial epics of frontier life . . . .

It may be thought strange—yet it is not—that a man of Slug's temperament and profession should be garbed as a movie extra. The truth was that he worked occasionally in the pictures, as do many of his ilk.

At the moment, however, he was not so employed. The clothes he wore were probably the property of some producing company, as was a similar outfit on the floor of the car.

A man of any resourcefulness at all, in Hollywood, never has trouble about a costume.

Perhaps it was the exploit of blowing a movie theater safe by a gang dressed as ushers that opened up to Slug the great possibilities of disguise.

The important ingredient in the whole matter was his unswerving admiration for Lucky Cavanaugh. It was admiration plus loyalty. Cavanaugh—with his careless goodwill—had founded this feeling in Tampico. "Here's enough to take care of the hospital bill and buy a ticket home," he had said. Slug promised to pay him back, and probably meant it. Now, at any rate, he was parked in front of Leni Luneska's home, risking his own freedom to help a pal.

"They was broadcasting your escape on the police radio and I picked it up," said Slug as Cavanaugh climbed into the car. The principal pastime in Hollywood is gossip; the second, listening to the police broadcast which all radios are tuned to receive. "Better take off that Panama and put on this sombrero."

Cavanaugh without the slightest hesitation, put on the sombrero.

"If you'll take off your coat and tie this bandanna around your neck—" suggested Slug.

Synopsis

At the premiere of her latest picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her criminal husband, Karl Kruger. Lucky Cavanaugh, gambler, who has just seen Leni for the first time, tries to make Kruger leave. Later Cavanaugh goes to see Kruger, waiting in a small office. Kruger rushes away from Cavanaugh and surprises burglars in the next office. One of them shoot him to death. Detective Mulrooney, well acquainted with Cavanaugh, gives him four days to find the killer or be arrested himself. Lucky takes Leni home. Lucky is warned that the killer is after him to prevent him from "squealing." Kruger's murderer lies in wait to kill Lucky. Lucky, arriving home, finds a jealous woman, named Annette, waiting for him. Steve Poletzki, the killer, aims at Lucky through a window and kills Annette by mistake. Next morning, Leni is swamped with congratulatory messages on the premiere. Her success is assured, but more important to her than that is Cavanaugh's love for her. Herman Gerstenfield, noted director, calls. He tries to persuade Leni to sign a new contract. Gerstenfield tells Leni that he is her friend. Leni reads about Cavanaugh's arrest. Mulrooney visits Leni. He consents to bring Cavanaugh to see her. Cavanaugh and Mulrooney become engaged in a heated argument, during which Cavanaugh knocks out the detective and escapes. After Mulroney leaves Cavanaugh appears in Leni's apartment.

PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN

By LAURA WHEELER

The Friendship Ring, like the circle of friends who might contribute towards making it, is outstanding for its variety. Made of many materials, the smallness of the patches permit even the tiniest scraps to be used. This old-time quilt was often made with each block done in different materials, though the same materials can be repeated as illustrated.

Pattern No. 484 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Help others, fellows!

You know one of the biggest reasons why we have the Junior Patrol and the Junior Patrol clubs is to give every kid a chance to have the fun of helping others—of doing something real nice for fellows less fortunate than himself, whether at school, at work or at play.

Maybe helping others doesn't seem like fun to you yet, fellows, but if you try it for a while, we are sure that you will soon begin to REALLY ENJOY helping others. You'll find that when others are happy around you, that you will be happier yourself.

Right here in the Mail Box we have often named various ways in which you can help others, and we're sure that you won't have to look very hard to find lots of ways to do it. Perhaps best of all you can help others by teaching them to be careful, so that they won't get hurt. Right in your own home there are lots of dangerous things which any kid can see and remove if he takes the trouble. For instance, some kids we know let their toys—wagons, skates, toy engines—lay around on the floor. What if someone stepped on them and the wheels skidded out from under them? Whoever did would have a bad fall—it may cause your mother or father to fall downstairs. Or maybe, when you are playing in a room, you move a floor lamp out of its usual place, and forget to put it back. Maybe someone will come in the room in the dark and fall over the cord or the lamp, not knowing that it has been moved. A loose step, a nail sticking out of the wall, boards on the ground with nails sticking up—all these things are dangerous. And as a good Junior Patrol member, every kid can help to keep such dangers out of his own home and neighborhood. Remember, when someone gets hurt—it takes a long time and lots of trouble to make him well again.

We know some kids who say they can't go hiking because they aren't allowed to go walking on the highways where hundreds of automobiles go whizzing past every hour. That is dangerous, and it is always best to walk on the left side of the street so that you FACE approaching traffic. Then you can see the cars coming and stay out of their way. But even better than these dangerous highways are some of Pittsburgh's wonderful parks, and out in other districts outside the city, some of the shady country lanes and roads. For instance, Frick Park has miles of trails—a walk there is always pleasant, and the quick squirrels play in the trees. Schenley Park, too, has miles of shady bridle paths, and they are nice walks, too.

Today we have a mighty nice letter from Diana D. Huffman, of Box 115, Scenery Hill. She wrote her letter on very pretty note paper—that sailor boy picture on it is very clever. Here it is:

"I will be in the third grade. I would like to be on your program. I don't get to Pittsburgh very often. I take piano lessons. I am already a member of the Junior Patrol. I was not at the Patrol picnic. I wanted to go, and I went to one the next day. I entertained 10 children. My cousin and I did some magic tricks. Three girls came to my house one night besides my sister and we played cards. I have a picture of my sister and I taken of us on Children's Day. I will send it to you. I am 8 years old, and my sister is 6 years old. I wish you, Snuggins, and Spike, Bill and Perce would come to my house this Sunday. I live in Scenery Hill about the middle of the town. Please let me know if you can come."

The boys have asked us to thank you very much for your kind invitation, Diana, and they are sorry they won't be able to come. You know, they are still on their river trip, and we are very much afraid that Snuggins and Perce are lost. We're hoping that there will be more information about them in the comic strip today.

MANY VOLUNTEER TO HELP MRS. FRISBY'S DIVORCE FIGHT.

Above snapshot was taken yesterday, showing some of the people who have come forward to help Mrs. Frisby in her struggle to obtain divorce evidence against her husband, Congressman Horace Frisby. "I want 10,000 witnesses," says Mrs. Frisby, "who will take the stand and swear that Mr. Frisby tried to flirt with them. I also want suspicious husbands. If you have any fur coats or jewelry which might have come from Mr. Frisby, one of our Defense League trucks will be glad to call for it. I can use all the evidence of this nature that you care to give. Each and every person who co-operates in this great cause will receive a card to hang in the window which says, 'We Done Our Part.'"

JESSIE'S HAVING A LOT OF FUN

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

Jesse (Polar Bear) Swift has been having a lot of fun the past day or two with a lot of the boys around town. Some way the boys got the notion that Jessie was going to be married. Maybe they argued he ought to be married. Any way, Jesse fell in with the gossip, and began to talk about getting a marriage license. Then he went to the recorder's office, and persuaded Recorder Perry to give him a big official envelop and put a blank marriafe license in it.

Jesse's been carrying this formidable looking envelop around with him and letting out mysterious hints. The boys are, darned near ready to charivari him.

The States Start Their Views

From now on we see no reason for the rest of the states to hold a repeal vote. Just have the Governor telephone it in.

Why spend good money on state-wide elections when you can get the same results with a postcard or two?

We wish to commend the citizen who first thought of putting the original manuscript of the Constitution under lock and key.

If the boggle-skulled cranks had scribbled all their improvements on that illustrious parchment it would now look like a tin-can tourist's back tires.

It would be full of blow-out patches, hemstitching, decimal points, notations and the glorious American eagle would be practicing short flights in parenthesis.

Still, the amendment makers have done very well. Out of twenty orders they've had only one cancellation.

That's the eighteenth as the crow flies. It established the non-refillable elbow and hung up a record for a non-stop flight around nothing.

It was the first warning we had that improvements are not always for the best. You can sink a boat by hanging too many reliable anchors on it. We concede it was a noble experiment.

We know it was a noble experiment because we tried it once.

The states are lining up for repeal like sparrows on a telegraph wire. But it takes thirty-six jacks under that stubborn axle to lift the wagon out of the red. We will say one thing about the reformers. They sure can fly a long ways with busted wings.

And don't think this is a victory over the boys who cook up codicils to the Constitution. Repeal is for the purposes of taxation. Once the depression is conquered, they will think up noble ways of starting another.

A reformer is like the bird who used to live in our town. Although he wasn't going anywhere he used to flag the through express just for the fun of stopping it.

Of course, it used to start again. He wasn't on it.

That didn't worry him. He had stopped something important and essential.

The City Deficit

The Administration Should Strive to Avoid a Tax Increase—Comment on Local News.

The Pittsburgh Real Estate Board's warning that the city faces the prospect of ending the year with a large increase in its deficit is a reminder that no provision was made for meeting last year's deficit when the tax rate for this year was fixed. It is difficult to see how the problem can be solved. We must hope for a speedy restoration of prosperity.

It is to be hoped the city administration will not feel bound to increase the tax rate. The law of diminishing returns suggests that that would be a futile procedure unless by that time there has been a very remarkable improvement in industrial conditions. With tax delinquencies extensive under the present rate an increase in the rate might simply produce more delinquencies.

There is not a chance, we suppose, of a cut in the tax rate. And Mayor John S. Herron destroyed, in his speech at North Side Carnegie Hall on Thursday night, any hope that might have been entertained of relief in the form of a reduction in the values placed on real estate by the tax assessors. Assessments were not inflated in the boom period, he said, and it is not expedient to reduce them now.

The reduction in the budget for this year, to which Mayor Herron called attention in his speech, was, of course, commendable; and it is to be hoped that the administration will find it possible to effect other economies. For increased federal taxes and other demands on the citizens are going to impose a heavy drain on incomes.

The welfare agencies serve notice that they will expect Pittsburghers to contribute more heavily to the Welfare Fund this autumn than they contributed last year. While the number of persons on the Allegheny County Emergency Committee's list of recipients of aid was reduced by 745 during the week of July 31-August 5, the last period for which statistics have been compiled, there are still 66,620 families dependent on the committee.

Apropos of welfare work, it is interesting to note that one of the four Pittsburghers who, at the invitation of President Roosevelt, will attend a welfare conference at the White House on September 8 is Richard K. Mellon. He has been active in local Welfare Fund campaigns and is serving as vice chairman in the special gifts division this year.

We think it is but fair to call attention to R. K. Mellon's active interest in philanthropy because in the recently published and extensively advertised book, "Mellon's Millions," by Harvey O'Connor, the Mellons are pictured as oppressors of the poor. The author even goes so far as to suggest that Judge Mellon did not think very highly of Christianity because Jesus was a poor man! No wonder the book has been denounced as a scurrilous travesty!

Mayor Herron's reference in his North Side speech to the efficiency of the police radio system and radio-equipped scout cars was particularly gratifying to the Sun-Telegraph, because this newspaper led the movement for the installation of the system and was in charge of some demonstrations which convinced former Director Clark, of the Department of Public Safety, of its usefulness.

Magistrate John J. Sweeney gave some good ad- vice in Police Court yesterday—advice that has been repeatedly given in the Hearst papers. If you must drink something alcoholic, he said, in effect, drink beer, and leave whisky alone. Very impressive is the Magistrate's statement that of the many persons who have been before him for drunkenness since April 1 only one man said he got drunk on beer.

The Department of Agriculture at Harrisburg re- ports an increase in rabies and mentions Allegheny, Fayette and Washington counties as among those in which the disease is particularly prevalent. Rabies is contracted and spread by dogs which are allowed to run at large. Every dog owner ought to keep his pet under control at all times.

Mad dogs are not our only dangerous animals. We notice among the donations to the Carnegie Museum, mentioned in the annual report, a copperhead snake caught by Stewart Johnston at Coraopolis. A sportsmen's association in Franklin County has notified the State Game Commission that it is raising funds to pay a bounty of 25 cents each on copperheads and rattlesnakes.

Pittsburghers will be pleased to learn that the De- partment of Justice at Washington has complimented the local Bureau of Police on its effective co-operation in fingerprint identification work. By sending the fingerprints of criminals arrested here to the fingerprint clearing house for the information of the police of other cities the local police sometimes acquire useful information about the records of their prisoners.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club asks autoists to help save the new highway signs from destruction by vandals. Autoists ought to be glad to do what they can, for the new signs are an improvement on the old ones, and should be carefully protected. They are low enough to come within the range of legally adjusted headlights, and bear symbols, the significance of which can be taken in at a glance by the illiterate.

The National Economy League's statement that while only two bodies a day, on the average, are taken to the county morgue, the Coroner has a staff of eight embalmers, is declared to have given a wrong impression. The embalmers, as deputy coroners, perform numerous other duties and are divided into three eight-hour shifts.

The Rev. Dr. L. D. Young, pastor of the Abbey Presbyterian Church of Dallas, Tex., has extended the Ten Commandments by compiling a list of 84 sins. Among them are aloofness, aping the world, and class distinction. You will find food for thought in the list, which appears in the American Weekly, to be distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Boob McNutt tries to circumvent Dr. Zano in his scheme to destroy the world. Undaunted by wasps six feet high, Boob writes a note of warning to the chief of police and attaches it to a toy balloon. Then something astounding happens. You will find it pictured by Rube Goldberg in Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Rich Man, Poor Man

Copyright, 1933,

The Federal Government is taking an active and effective part in the crusade against racketeering.

For this, the Government deserves praise and loyal support.

Racketeering, as one criminologist has said, is extortion levied on the cost of living. It must be stopped.

But what about the Income Tax Racket, for which the Government itself is to blame?

The rich man, whose taxes should be proportionate to his wealth, may pay no income tax at all.

He may evade the tax by reporting hypothetical "losses" in the stock market greater than his taxable income.

Or he may put his money into tax exempt securities, and evade the income tax in that way.

But the wage earner and the salaried man have to pay. Out of every hard-won dollar, above mere pittances, that comes out of the pay window the income tax extorts its unjust portion.

This is a racket that can be easily stopped. Congress, in January, can abolish the iniquitous income tax, and enact a General Manufacturers' Sales Tax which will give the Government more revenue than the income tax provides, and will be fair to every citizen.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Light as a Summer Love

One of woman's most beautiful illusions is that the marriage ceremony will transform a gay Don Juan into a nice, tame porch-sitter and perambulator-pusher.

One thing that simply can't be "modernized" is LOVE. Trying to make a success of marriage, without the good old-fashioned brand is about as futile as trying to make bread and leaving out the flour.

Once, if a man didn't marry, it was because he couldn't afford to marry. Nowadays, it is more often the girl who feels that she can't afford to marry—unless she loves him enough to give up permanent waves and spend most of her salary on waffle-irons and vacuum cleaners.

A clever woman can marry a robot or a store-dummy and manage to make him over into something which other women think worth stealing. While a foolish woman can draw a prize husband and manage to mess him up so that he seems like an affliction.

The honeymoon is not over until the bridegroom glances up some evening and wonders just what happened to him that he should find himself sitting opposite the same girl every day at breakfast and dinner.

Marriage is that point at which a man ceases to make a lot of women happy by making love to them—and begins making one woman unhappy by forgetting to make love to her.

Hauling a man over the coals never cured a man's sins—but it sometimes does a lot to relieve a woman's feelings.

When a man goes sentimental and remarries in his Indian summer he so often picks out a frivolous, overpainted little thing that he wouldn't have permitted his first wife to speak to.

The rarest and most wonderful thing that you can give anybody in this world is a little honest GRATITUDE!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Two friends in as many weeks have popped in airily to prattle they were washed up with the daily struggle. They had retired. Each in middle years had decided to shuck the cares of a workaday world, play golf, travel and enjoy themselves. For them Life begins!

Or so they think. I'm a Doubting Thomas. I long to pass out of the human picture immediately after tapping out a fruity paragraph for the wind-up of a column. That would be Nirvana! I can think of nothing so bleak as a day of nothing but loafing. And I'm a lazy oaf.

The only folk who should hanker for the chimney corner are those with a keen zest for art and music or collectors. For 23 years—a few shivery bars of "Hearts and Flowers," professor! —I worked every day including Sundays and during a six months' stretch of semi-invalidism when not outside a room.

I could not retire because I haven't what-it-takes. Even though I had I would not give it a flicker of thought. If I love anything in this world, I love my job. Too many treasured things would go out of my life with a permanent click of the lid on my typewriter.

Most, I think, I would miss the morning mail. Especially those tri-monthly letters from a college pedant, who catches me up beautifully in shoddy syntax. And the immature verse from Dora the blind girl. I would miss, too, those hasty but radiant hoots signed "Hanque" from Henry Sell; ribald scrawls from Verne Porter; Frank Case's mots juste; Charlie Driscoll's salty slams about people we mutually abhor; Theodore Dreiser's ringing of some boggle with "I'll larn yuh!"; wisdom from Ed Howe; reminiscences from George Ade, Harry Leon Wilson, Charles G. Norris and exciting data scribbled by Gordon Sinclair and Edison Marshall in the earth's queer nooks.

Then the amazing visitors. Fascinating human oddments I would never see were I not an outlet for publicity. The red-head damozel who plans to hop on one foot from Yonkers to Seattle. Young Clyde Beatty of the lion's cage. Alfredo Codona of the flying trapeze. Hak Ray, Indian seer, who eats blotters off my desk and exudes smoke casually through outstanding ears. One Eye Connelly.

Telephone calls, too. In the middle of the night "Reno calling;" Roysterers relaying gentle divorce satire—husband and wife in a final fling before divorce on the morrow. Or the anxious soul, pondering future life, who announces: "When I hang up, I'll be nose-diving out the window so what?" You think it a grisly gag until the morning paper arrives.

No more first night seats for George White's and Earl Carroll's. Or feigning indifference at the spaniel beseeching of autographists. No more wires from Maj. Bowes: "My luncheon to Ethel Barrymore will be a flop without you!" How stimulating and fabulous to be hailed with even pseudo-importance!

Theoretically we abhor haste. Yet self-analyzing proves we have been happiest in a hurry—racing for steamer or train, zooming above clouds, helter-skeltering and giddyaping. Tugs for lethargy and quietism are tricky, soporifics lulling us toward a contemplative happiness never attained. No person fills a newspaper column daily without being on the dancing edge of things. Indolence may be exquisite. I've never enjoyed its delicate after-taste. But I know what I like. And I'll keep my daily liaison with the uproar.

Everybody thrills to hippodroming. The scrub lady in the circus blue seats tingles to the acrobat's blown kiss. Anyone writing respectable copy for newspapers or magazines is accorded a meed of deference. Agreeable compensation of the trade. But when those avenues close, such gestures flutter away like leaves in a blizzard. And for those who wince, no blight is so blighting.

* * *

All must drop out of the swift uptake. It should be graceful with a jack-knife bow and jaunty whirl of the cape. Ninety-nine out of 100 wait to be kicked downstairs. That's why I expect to gallop over the horizon, clackety-clack, with plumes waving. They'll not be propping me up in a club window like one of those over-ripe Kentucky colonels. For listen, suckers, by that time I'll be on the Vendean coast playing chess in my garden with M. le cure.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Wiley Post said a great thing when he landed in Berlin. You know the story . . . that record-breaking trans-Atlantic trip through darkness and freezing fog . . . the weary landing . . . the warning of danger ahead—

Post didn't need the warning. He'd flown that trail before—knew every deadly menace. So he might have been excused if he'd postponed the risk a bit.

"Two hours to refuel—can't make it in less," they said.

There was his chance to rest—treat his inflamed eyes. Already he had saved nearly 18 hours. Berlin was his for the taking—the crowds were waiting. Why not loaf a little, enjoy his laurels? But not for Wiley Post?

"DAMN IT, I WANT TO PUSH ON!" he cried.

Bad weather ahead. They showed him the charts. But it made no difference.

"I CAN'T HELP IT! I MUST PUSH ON!"

He gulped down his slim meal. He yelled farewell—and flew!

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

A great answer, that! More than a great answer—a great creed—the only creed for any eager, fighting soul.

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

Why? Where? What's it all about? Is it all worth while? Is there anything at the end? Or is this just all?

I don't know. I can't answer those questions . . . can't even let myself ask them. Time's passing. Life's slipping. Presently it will all be over—whether I go or stay. I must choose now . . . choose quick! Which is the better—to live life safely . . . to risk life gloriously? Some choose one way—some another. For me there can be but one choice—

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

I must push on—through the night of my own ignorance, through the freezing fog of my own doubt. Nearly everything in me wants to stop . . . my cowardice, my laziness, my greed and conceit. Even those things which seem noblest in life, love and pity, decent pride and ambition—even these things tug at me to stay. But—

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

For, though nearly everything in me wants to stop, one thing in me wants to go on. What's that thing? What's that nameless urge in me which won't let me rest, won't let me be comfortable or content? I don't know that either. Maybe it's my personal soul, speeding on, from star to star. Maybe it's just the voice of life, crying—"I want out!" Nobody knows. Nobody can tell me what I'm all about. Nobody can even tell me whether it's wiser to go or stay. And, if I do stay, most folks will certainly give me a hand—for it's the stayers who make life easy for the rest of the herd. And yet—

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

No matter what people say about me . . . or do to me . . . I must push on. In spite of everything I must push on . . . in spite of love, or hate, success or failure, grief or happiness, pride or pain. Laurels mustn't stop me. Laughter mustn't stop me. Nor threats . . . nor kisses . . . nor tears . . . nor graves . . . nor investments . . . nor profits . . . nor anything, however dear or dreadful, which can possibly check that flight for which I was created.

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

For that is all that counts—the flight. Whether it be the flight of my soul, or the flight of life—that is all that counts. To risk everything—to give everything—that life may lift a little higher toward the stars—that is all that counts. No matter where it leads me, no matter what it costs—

"I MUST PUSH ON!"

On through the night . . . and dawn—

Through the blistering noon . . . and the fading light . . .

Till the years are gone . . . and the dreams are done . . .

And the stars close around me—

And then—is there God?

Whether there is or there isn't—

THE FLIGHT ITSELF IS ENOUGH!

I MUST PUSH ON!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

After Twenty Years

We stand here once again and, standing so,
Our bodies do what souls cannot achieve.
Our feet have crossed this sill where, long ago,
We came together, on a springtime eve
When youth and love surged hotly in our blood,
And we were one as few have ever been;
Glad memories return in golden flood
To sweep away the strangeness of the scene.
Forgotten long, it all comes back today.
Our chairs were by this hearth, our bed stood here;
These walls have echoed to our laughter gay,
This mirror has reflected hours most dear.
Our feet walk where they trod in youthful pride;
Not so can souls thrust twenty years aside!

Text for Today

For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?—Mark, viii:36.

The Human Side of the News

Americans in Paris Suffer from the Fall of the Dollar—The Mystery of Sir Basil Zaharoff

By EDWIN C. HILL

AMERICANS in Paris have been having a rather thin time, one gathers from the flow of the news. The fall of the dollar and consequent rise of the franc has been a hard blow to tourists who went abroad when francs were 25 to the dollar. They are now only 18 or so.

Tourist centers in Gay Paree yawn emptily, and one hears that the celebrated Mr. Joe Zelli's place high up on Montmartre finds few free-spending customers and that the "Royal Box" is tenanted largely by gamblers.

All such purveyors of Paris night whoopee must look back mournfully upon the golden days of four or five years ago when every American in Paris was looked upon as a millionaire, and slightly unbalanced, even for millionaires. Most of them acted like millionaires, if the truth be told, the minute they piled off the ship at Havre or Cherbourg and caught, on the east wind, the thrilling, intoxicating breeze from the greatest hunting ground of pleasure in the well known world.

Back in 1928 and 1929, one could loaf on the terrace of the Cafe de la Paix, where the boulevards begin, and identify residents of three-fourths of the states of the Union as they drifted past, eyes wide with the wonder and beauty and kaleidoscopic changes of fascinating Paris.

There is a well-worn saying that there are two places in the world where, if one sits long enough, one will meet everyone one has known. One is Port Said, where the West ends and the East begins, where there ain't no Ten Commandments (See R. Kipling) and a man can raise a thirst. The other is the terrace of the Cafe de la Paix in Paris.

There is, or was, just enough truth in that old saw to make it interesting, but times have changed. Montmartre, with its night clubs, and the heights of Montparnasse, with the Cafe du Dome and La Rotonde, are in mourning because of the scarcity of "les Americains," whose high spirits were often more in evidence than their manners.

A Mysterious Figure

MENTION in the news of one of the most mysterious men alive, Sir Basil Zaharoff, recalls the little that is known of the strange story of his life. He is the legendary figure in modern life, the man whose secret nobody knows. He bears a Russian name, but apparently is of Greek or Levantine origin. France has given to him the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, which is rarely bestowed on foreigners, but Sir Basil is also a Knight Grand Cross of the British Empire, a distinction usually conferred on British subjects alone. All that is really known is that this man, so fabulously rich, who has had perhaps the most singular career of any man alive today, was of obscure birth and probably humble origin.

Yet by extraordinary talents and force of character he arose to a position of such authority that he caused wars to be made or unmade.

Ralph Thompson, writing in Current History, notes that the German government during the war put a price of $100,000 on his head. We hear stories that in his Paris mansion he dines from solid gold plates with jewel inlaid knives and forks and spoons. A New York newspaper announces that his chief pleasure is to spend long evenings in his kitchen, cooking rare foods brought by airplanes from distant lands and seas.

One story printed about him is that he has written 58 volumes of his autobiography and has given orders that every page and word is to be destroyed at his death. He has never told his own story or given an interview, this legendary man, now aged and retired, who sold hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of munitions to the countries of Europe and whose own fortune is reputed to be half a billion.

Lord Beaverbrook's Estimate of Him

LORD BEAVERBROOK, English editor, has said of this almost mythical character:

"The destinies of nations are his sport. The movement of armies his special delight. In the wake of war this mysterious figure moves over tortured Europe."

But no man actually knows whether he is the devil that some have painted or the angel in disguise that his defenders have declared him to be. It is known, though, that romance entered his life—that he was the hero of an amazing love story.

When he was still a young man, traveling for a great munitions house, Sir Basil met on a train in Spain an exquisitely beautiful girl with whom he fell instantly and desperately in love. But the Spanish beauty, as he quickly found out, was pledged to another man, a scion of royalty, none other than the Duke of Marchena and a cousin of the former King of Spain, Alfonso XIII. For his lady, who, inexorably bound by the customs of her class and country, shortly afterward was married to the duke, Sir Basil waited for more than 30 years, until Marchena died.

And then, in 1924, he and the Dutchess were married, both white-haired by then but still very much in love. He was over 70, and the Dutchess was a grandmother several times, but romance burned brightly in their hearts, and for the two years that destiny gave them together their life was idyllic in Sir Basil's many mansions. And then Lady Zaharoff, onetime Dutchess of Marchena, passed from the earthly scene and Zaharoff was left alone.

Oddly enough, this romance of his life is about all that is credibly known about Europe's man of mystery. And today, well past 80, Sir Basil Zaharoff sits solitary and silent in one or another of his palaces, spending hours, they say, gazing at the portrait of his lovely dutchess—two portraits, rather the one she had painted for him just before she married the duke, the other painted half a lifetime afterward when she was united to Sir Basil.

Perhaps some day, when the secret archives come to light, and dead men's letters shall be read, we shall know the true history of this extraordinary individual, this old man whose soul is in the past, living out his fabulous life in the sunshine of Monte Carlo.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

It is unwise for old-time friends, visiting in a home where there are children, to relate foolish experiences of youthful days, involving the children's father and mother.

Youthful infractions of home or school rules impress children, and there is a double interest where their own parents are concerned.

There is a natural deduction that if Dad and mother did thus and so when they were young, they have a right to pattern after them.

But parents have seen the folly of their own doings and have also observed the tendencies of their children.

They are wondering how they can help the children over that period and keep them out of certain mischief.

Then come the old friends, perhaps after many long years of separation and they begin to "reminisce."

The parents seem to get a lot of amusement out of the tales of when they were young and broke the rules, so it looks to the kiddies.

Most parents find it hard enough to impress their children with the things they should avoid as they grow up.

Visiting friends can do a lot of damage, and find themselves unwelcome, as guests, if they are indiscreet in their revelations of personal infractions.

Isn't It So?

A moth is not a society favorite, although it frequently appears in a dress suit.

If we were all as good as we advise others to be heaven would be right here on earth.

If a man only had nine lives like a cat, he could insure them all and collect on one occasionally when he got hard up.
